

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at <http://books.google.com/>

600005423K

29.

16.

AN

J. H. 1030

INTRODUCTION

TO

GREEK GRAMMAR

ON A NEW PLAN.

FOR THE USE OF SCHOOLS AND PRIVATE STUDENTS.

BY THOMAS FOSTER BARHAM, M. B.

LATE OF QUEEN'S COLLEGE, CAMBRIDGE.

LONDON:

PRINTED BY ARTHUR TAYLOR, COLEMAN STREET;

SOLD BY ROWLAND HUNTER, ST. PAUL'S CHURCH-YARD, AND
C. UPHAM, EXETER.

1829.

16.

P R E F A C E.

TO swell a little book by a long preface would be unreasonable : although, therefore, something in the way of apology will naturally be expected from one who undertakes to add another Greek grammar to the long list of those which are already before the public, it will be fitting that this part of the author's task should be dispatched in as few words as possible.

To come then at once to the point, the author conceives that in the elementary works on Greek grammar at present in use, notwithstanding the many improvements which successive authors have made, there still remain several serious defects which it is possible to remove. The principal of these we proceed to notice.

In the first place it may be remarked, in general, that in the models which they exhibit, our grammars do not give a due prominence and precedency to the standard or generally approved forms of the language, as distinguished from such as have no claims to that character. We find, on the contrary, a variety of dialectic peculiarities and obsolete or even imaginary forms, mingled on equal terms with those forms which are really in current use, or even substituted in their place. On the impropriety of such a method it is scarcely necessary to dwell, and I will therefore proceed to illustrate my meaning by a few particulars. In the optative mood, for example, of the aorist active, the common grammars present the learner with two distinct forms, one in -αιμι, as τυψαιμι, which is given as the standard, and another in -εια, as τυψεια, which is called Æolic, and then leave him to comprehend this anomaly as he can. Now the fact is, as is well known, that neither are both these forms in use, nor either of them exclusively, but a certain form that is made up by borrowing some persons from one of them and some from the other. Again, for the imperfect of the verbs τιθέναι and διδόναι we are presented with ετιθην, εδιδων; yet it is certain that these are forms which in the singular number are hardly ever employed. A similar remark may be extended to the aorists εθην and εδων. An erroneous impression is likewise conveyed in regard to those forms both of nouns and verbs which, as actually met with, have commonly undergone contraction, but which in our grammars figure away in their uncontracted state in parallel columns with the contracted examples, as if both equally represented the Greek language; nor is the learner at all clearly apprized that one only is the real model, and the other often no more than a creature of the imagination, and at all events not such a form as he is at liberty to use. Thus, for example, a boy is taught to say τιμαω, τιμῶ, τιμάεις, τιμάς, &c. and naturally regarding that as the principal which stands first, he takes τιμαω, a word which is hardly Greek, for the common and proper form of the verb, and will be likely to use it as such when he comes to do his exercise: which would be about as much to the purpose as if in English one should say, a fourteen-night for a fortnight, or I slepted for I slept.

A similar error is committed in teaching boys to refer divers verbs to imaginary or obsolete roots, rather than to those with which they actually correspond in practice. How much worse than useless is it, for instance, to put into the learner's head such words as ληβω and θηνω, as the presents of ελαβον and εθανον. It would be a similar case, and not at all more unwarrantable, if an English grammar should put down I wend, I wright, as the presents of I went, I wrought. The writers who indulge in fancy-work of this kind seem hardly aware that, for aught we know, it is as likely that the present was formed from the aorist as the aorist from the present, and that at any rate it is the duty of a practical grammarian to exhibit a language as he finds it, and not to substitute for its real forms others which, though more compliant with his system, have the defect of being wholly fictitious.

But I have now to notice what I conceive to be an error of a still more injurious nature. We have seen the grammarians filling up their forms with obsolete and imaginary words instead of those in real use : I now observe, that by the same system of fiction they multiply unduly the forms themselves, inventing several which do not exist. I allude especially to the tenses of the verb. I think it can be indisputably proved, that no less than seven tenses have in this way been allotted to the regular Greek verb, ἑπὲρ μὲν : namely, a second future, active, passive, and middle ; a second aorist ditto, and the tense called the perfect middle. All these tenses, be it observed, are represented in our grammars as naturally and properly appertaining to the declension of the common regular form, and as forming a part of its just complement of tenses, as much as any others whatever. Now I maintain that in this procedure mere redundancies or duplicates of formation, occurring only in a few particular verbs, have been erroneously represented as a part of the regular and essential developement of the Greek verb in general.

In the opinion just expressed the author is not guided exclusively by his own judgement ; indeed, were that the case, he would feel less confidence in its correctness. It has, however, in substance, been brought forward repeatedly, although it has not, so far as I know, been either pointedly insisted on or explicitly stated. It seems to be practically adopted to a considerable extent in the grammar used at Charterhouse School in London ; and the following passage from Matthiæ will show that the facts on which it rests are distinctly acknowledged by him. After giving an account of the formation of the tenses, he adds, “ There is no single verb that has all these tenses that can regularly be derived from it. It is very seldom that a verb has the two tenses aor. 1 and aor. 2 act. as ἀπηγγείλα and ἀπηγγέλον, the aor. 1 and aor. 2 pass., and perf. 1 and 2, at the same time. When it has these tenses, they commonly belong to two different dialects, or two different ages of a dialect, as ἐπιθον only in the old Ionic, ἐπεισα in Attic and the rest; ἀπηλλαχθην, συνελεχθην, in the older Attic dialect; ἀπηλλαγην, συνελεγην in the new; or they have different significations, as πεπραχα in an active sense, πεπραγα in a neuter sense."—Blomfield's Matthiæ, p. 244.

As far as concerns the facts of the case, the foregoing citation bears me out in all that I advance. But is it not surprising that with these facts before him this intelligent writer should not have drawn from them that practical inference which seems at once so obvious and so important? If it be a fact that very few verbs possess more than one future and one aorist, and that even those few do so only in consequence of the variations of the language in different dialects and ages, why continue to exhibit two of each of these tenses as the proper and ordinary complement of the verb, and to encumber with them the common models of declension? This surely tends not only to create unnecessary labour, but likewise much confusion in the mind of the student, and, till it be properly explained, raises an almost insurmountable barrier to a just acquaintance with the use of the verb.

I shall once more endeavour to render what I advance more intelligible and convincing by an appeal to our own language. The occasional redundancy in the Greek tenses appears to be perfectly analogous to what may be observed in many verbs in English. The past tense, in our language, commonly and regularly terminates in -ed, as I received; and what this form is to the English verb, the aorist in -αι, as λῦσαι, is to the Greek. But we have also many verbs which form their past tense irregularly, such as I saw, I knew; and just so we have in Greek many verbs that form their aorist irregularly, most commonly making the infinitive in -ειν, but sometimes in other endings, as λαβεῖν, θανεῖν, θεῖναι, δοῦναι. Still here is no sort of pretence for saying either that there are two preterites in English or two aorists in Greek. All that can be said with truth is, that the same tense is variously formed in different verbs. But to complete the analogy, it may be observed, that as we have in English a few verbs which possess at once two forms of the preterite, such as I hanged and I hung, I caught and I caught, I beseeched and I besought, I chid and I chode, so also we allow that there are a few instances in Greek in which the same verb may, and actually does, present us at once with two forms of the aorist, as κτεῖναι and κτανεῖν, αλλαχθῆναι and αλλαγήναι. But still, even here, we have no just reason for regarding these duplicate forms, either in English or in Greek, as two different tenses, seeing that their meaning is precisely the same, and that they are mere varieties of formation, occurring for the most part in different periods of the language, or in different dialects. On the whole there is plainly no better reason for assigning two aorists or two futures to the Greek verb, than two preterites to the English : although this last be a thing which never was done, as far as I am aware, by any grammarian that has hitherto meddled with our language. Deeming then the real nature of this case sufficiently clear, I have ventured to adopt a practice corresponding with it, and in consequence have been enabled to exhibit the Greek verb in a simpler form than has hitherto been done in any grammar with which I am acquainted. I have little doubt that nothing has prevented the same step from having been taken by others long ago, but an excessive deference to the authority of the Greek grammarians of the middle ages, men to whom assuredly much honour is due, but who nevertheless were more distinguished by subtlety than good sense.

There are some other particulars of minor importance, which, however, it will be proper just to notice. It will be perceived that in the tables of the declensions of the nouns and verbs the dual number is commonly omitted. This was thought expedient from considering that this form is comparatively but rarely used, and in the sacred writings never, while at the same time a few very simple rules will enable the student to form it from the plural at all times when he has occasion. Hence it appeared better not to encumber with it those forms which it is necessary to be continually repeating in the exercise of parsing. By omitting the dual we also preserve an analogy with the grammar of other languages.

The verb has been further simplified by consolidating the middle and passive voices, the two middle tenses receiving a place among the passive, to which both in sense and formation they are closely allied. Thus the voices are reduced from three to two, and that, we are confident, with practical advantage to the learner.

In respect to the syntax it is proper to state, that we have been guided very much in that department by the authority of Matthiæ, and have borrowed many of our examples from his elaborate work. Our aim has been to admit nothing into the rules that is not at once clear, practical, and important; and to sustain them by no examples but such as are derived from the best authors. Many pains have been taken with this part of the work throughout; but, after all, the author knows that he has reason to crave indulgence for its imperfections. He believes, however, that on one important point at least, namely the use of the moods and tenses, more precise and condensed information is here afforded than can be found in any work of similar extent. Indeed in almost all our common grammars this interesting subject has been strangely neglected.

On the advantage of the use of the accents in Greek, both as confined to writing and as attempted to be expressed in pronunciation, very different opinions have been maintained: some even abandoning them altogether, while other considerable authorities have retained only the perispômen. It will be seen that a middle course is here pursued : the common euphonic tones dependant on the quantity having been omitted, as being of minor practical utility, troublesome from their number, and of difficult utterance : while the remaining tones, which are grammatical and significant, together with all the perispômens, have been retained. These, as written characters, often serve the purposes of useful distinction, and in pronunciation may either be observed or neglected as is thought proper. Before quitting this subject, I cannot forbear referring the student to Foster's excellent little Essay on Accent and Quantity.

We have appended to the alphabet some notice of the ancient and genuine pronunciation of the letters, so far as the learned are pretty well agreed on that point. We think that there are some considerable advantages in following this pronunciation practically, but that is a question which we must leave to be decided by the student himself or his instructor.

To one only additional topic can we here allude, and that is the mode suggested of expressing the Greek by the English characters. In order to render the Greek words familiar to the mind, as well as for convenience both in printing and writing Greek quotations in an English context, it is very desirable to be able to express Greek in English letters in a complete and unambiguous manner. We have been somewhat led astray in this matter by too closely following the Latin, whose limited alphabet was less sufficient for the task than our own. The substitution, for instance, of c for k in transferring Greek into English, is not only unreasonable but injurious, as it tends both to corrupt the pronunciation and to obscure the etymology. And I cannot but think that it would be advantageous, if, instead of representing the Greek ϕ by ph, which is using two letters where one would answer as well, we were to express it by our f, as the Italians do. There is also some difficulty in respect to the long vowels η and ω , as no method has hitherto been adopted for distinguishing them from the short ones, both being alike represented by e and o. For this inconvenience I propose a simple remedy. By marking the long e with a grave or circumflex accent, in the manner of the French, we obtain a ready representation for the Greek η ; while the English w, already variously pronounced, and often as a vowel, seems well fitted to represent the Greek ω , to which it is nearly allied both in sound and figure; nor need the orthography thence resulting be thought uncouth, seeing that in Welsh names we are already familiar with it. This method, then, we submit as one by which the Greek may very conveniently and adequately be represented in English characters.

But the fact is, that the Greek language has for ages been in bondage to the Latin, the tyranny of which has laid heavy impositions on all those that have sought to cultivate an acquaintance with it. To the literature, as to the land of Greece, our road has hitherto lain through the dominions of Rome, and we have been subjected in consequence to her tolls and passports, and other manifold vexations. But the time is now come when the Greek language, as well as the Greek people, is to be emancipated. Public good sense is encouraging those works on which pedants still frown, Greek grammars and lexicons written in English, and will continue to do so still more cordially. We doubt not that the tide which has begun to flow in this direction will still swell much higher and deeper, till it has surmounted every obstacle, and enriched the whole field of literature. Amidst the many discoveries and improvements of this latter age, it still deserves to be remembered that the gift of speech is the distinguishing prerogative of man, the immediate transcript and expression of reason, the noblest offspring of intellect, and the great instrument by which all knowledge is attained, communicated, and recorded. An acquaintance, therefore, with the finest forms of language will never cease to be a most worthy pursuit of the intellectual world. It was, we may believe, for wise purposes, with respect to the great destinies of mankind, that Providence raised up in the Greeks a nation endowed with a genius for language in a pre-eminent degree, and placed them in such circumstances as favoured the extensive diffusion of their tongue among surrounding nations; and we cannot without admiration observe, that it was ordained that the scriptures of the new and universal dispensation should be written in this same language, as best fitted indeed for that sacred service, but by which also a diffusion and duration were secured to it coextensive with Christianity itself.

We are of opinion that some instruction in Greek ought to enter into every plan of liberal education, and that for both sexes. For this opinion our first and chief reason is, that this is the original language of the Christian scriptures: then likewise, because it is confessedly the finest of known tongues, and contains, both in poetry and prose, the most perfect specimens of composition which time has preserved; pieces distinguished above all others by the same simple but inimitable excellence which marks those works in sculpture and architecture which have come down to us from the same people. To which reasons may be added, that as Greek is the common fountain of philosophical terms to all modern languages, so a moderate acquaintance with it is the shortest and most effectual method of ensuring a clear understanding of these. On these grounds the Greek rests its claims to a place in general education. To every one who is a Christian in more than the name this study opens the most pleasing and satisfactory sources of religious knowledge, and affords the best security against being tossed about at random on the restless sea of controversy: while it tends at the same time to the general advancement of taste and literature, and is among the best means of improving our own language, and of correcting the insensibility of our northern ears to the beauties of speech.

Finally, the reader is reminded not to expect in this book more than it professes to be, an introduction to Greek grammar: as it is by no means intended to supersede the use of larger works when the scholar shall have made a sufficient progress. On the contrary, an attentive study of some of the best of these, and especially of the admirable work of Matthiæ, is recommended as indispensable to every one who aims at a critical and scholarlike knowledge of the language. But not only is it important, as a preparation even for the highest attainments, that the first principles should be taught as simply and correctly as possible, but it is also certain that in this age, when the objects of study are so much multiplied, a very profound acquaintance with a dead language is more than will be attempted by the great majority of students. This little work may not, therefore, it is hoped, be unserviceable to any class ; but at the same time, the author confesses that it is for the majority that he principally writes, and that his highest aim has been to produce a work of popular utility ; one calculated to impart just so much knowledge of Greek grammar as it will be really useful to acquire in the course of a liberal but general education.

Exeter, A.D. 1829.

AN INTRODUCTION

TO

GREEK GRAMMAR.

GRAMMAR, or the art of writing and speaking a language correctly, is usually divided into four parts.

Every language being in fact double, namely, the written and the spoken, the first part of grammar teaches the correspondence of these two, which lies in the just utterance of the several written characters, in syllables, words, and sentences.

The second part distinguishes the different sorts of words, arranges them in classes under appropriate names, and shows the manner in which they are formed from one another.

The third part, called Syntaxis, lays down the rules which are to be observed in arranging words together in sentences.

The fourth part, which is less essential, treats of the structure of verse.

PART THE FIRST.

ON THE GREEK CHARACTERS AND PRONUNCIATION.

The Greek Alphabet consists of twenty-four letters, whose characters, names, and sounds, together with their numeral value, are as follow :

A	a	αλφα	alfa	a	1
B	β	βῆτα	bêta	b	2
Γ	γ	γαμμα	gamma	g	3
Δ	δ	δελτα	delta	d	4
E	ε	εῖ, η ε ψιλὸν	ei or e-psilon	e	5
Z	ζ	ζῆτα	zêta	z	7
H	η	ῆτα	êta	ê or è	8
Θ	θ	θῆτα	thêta	th	9
I	ι	ιώτα	iwta (iôta)	i	10
K	κ	καππα	kappa	k	20
Λ	λ	λαμβδα	lambda	l	30
M	μ	μῦ	my	m	40
N	ν	νῦ	ny	n	50
Ξ	ξ	ξῖ	xi	x	60
O	ο	ο μικρὸν	o-mikron	o	70
Π	π	πῖ	pi	p	80
P	ρ	ρῶ	riw (rô)	r	100

Σ	σ s	σίγμα	sigma	s	200
T	τ	ταυ	tau	t	300
Υ	υ	υ ψιλόν	hy-psilon	y or u	400
Φ	φ	φι	fi	f or ph	500
X	χ	χι	khi	kh	600
Ψ	ψ	ψι	psi	ps	700
Ω	ω	ω μέγα	w-mega	w or δ	800

Note.—Six was denoted by ς called episemon, and 90 by a mark called koppa.

Σ was otherwise written C, and Ω had also the form of W.

Observations on the Letters.

Of the foregoing letters, seven are vowels, (φωνήεντα, fwnèenta) namely, α, ε, η, ι, ο, υ, ω.

Their sounds are believed to have been nearly as follows :

A, either long, as a in papa, or short, as a in fat.

E, always short, as e in get, best, the.

H, always long, as é in fête or a in fate. We have no one letter in English corresponding with this, but may represent it by é or è.

I, either long, as i in marine or ee in feel, or short as i in fit.

O, always short, as o in dog, to.

Υ, like the French u, as in plus, publique; but in diphthongs like our own u.

Ω, always long, as o in remote or oa in throat. We have no one letter equivalent to this, but may conveniently represent it by w, to which it is allied both in sound and form.

On the pronunciation of the consonants we need only remark, that

1. Γ is always hard, as in get, give, except when followed by κ, χ, or another γ, in which cases it takes the sound of ng; thus αγγελος is sounded angelos, αγχι, ankhi.

2. Ζ had a double sound, probably that of ds: thus τραπεζα, trapeza, was pronounced trapedsa.

3. Χ had a guttural sound, not found in English, but such as may still be heard in German, Welsh, Modern Greek, and other languages.

Out of the vowels are composed several diphthongs, which, with their probable sounds, are as follow:—

Αι, ai, as in aisle, or nearly as i in fine.

Αυ, au, as ou in out, or as au in German and Italian.

Ει, ei, as in receive, but more distinctly.

Ευ, eu, as in euphony.

Οι, oi, as in oil, but with the o rather softer.

Ου, ou, as in soup, you, or as oo in fool.

Υι, ui, as in the French huile, or nearly as the English we.

To these may be added ηυ and ωυ, which are called improper, and were probably sounded not very differently from αυ and ου. Εω, also, is frequently pronounced as a single syllable, like yeo in yeomen, as in πολεως, polews, of a town.

The consonants are distinguished into the mute, or aphonous (αφωνα, afwona), the semivowels or hemiphonous (ἡμιφωνα, hèmifwona), and the double.

The mute are nine: three labial, π, β, φ.

three dental, τ, δ, θ.

three guttural, κ, γ, χ.

The first letter in each of these classes is called slender (ψιλὸν, psilon), the second middle (μεσον, meson), and the third aspirate (δασὺ, dasy).

Only the corresponding letters of each class can be immediately conjoined, as may be seen in the following words: ἑπτὰ, hepta; ἑβδομος, hebdomos; ἀφθαι, afthai.

The semivowels are, λ, μ, ν, ρ, σ, of which the four first are called liquids.

The double letters are, ζ, ξ, ψ; ζ being equivalent to δσ, or as some say σδ, ξ to κσ or γσ, ψ to πσ or ῥσ.

A comma placed thus (‘) over a vowel at the beginning of a word has the force of h, as ἐν, hen, one.

A slender consonant cannot immediately precede h, but is changed into its aspirate, as in καθ’ ἡμῶν, kath’ hēmwn, for κατ’ ἡμῶν’ kat’ hemwn, against us.

On some other Characters.

In cases where one word ends and the next begins with a vowel, one of the vowels, especially the former, is often cut off. This is indicated by a mark called an apostrophos, thus, ἀπ’ οὐρανοῦ, ap’ ouranoû, for ἀπὸ οὐρανοῦ, apo ouranoû, from heaven; ὦ ’νθρώπε, w ’nthrwpe, for ὦ ἀνθρώπε, w anthrwpe, o man.

Two dots placed over a diphthong show that it must be pronounced as two syllables, which is called a diairesis: as αἶξε, aïxe, he rushed.

As to Stops, the comma and full stop are like our own: a single dot on a level with the top of the letters, thus, τρεῖς serves both for our colon and semicolon: the mark of a question is our semicolon: and our note of admiration is also sometimes used.

ON TIME AND TONE.

Syllables are pronounced with time and tone, from which arise the music of speech and the structure of verse.

On Time.

In respect to time syllables are either long or short, a long syllable being allowed twice as much time in utterance as a short one.

Note.—This measured allowance of time, which is also called quantity, is not attached to syllables of necessity but by choice, or the custom of the language. Among ourselves, whose ears are less refined, it is comparatively little attended to; but the Greeks and Romans observed it with the greatest exactness, and their poetry was founded on it.

In assigning to syllables a long or short time, a certain respect is had to that which they naturally occupy in a distinct and equable utterance.

The long or double time is allowed, in general, to such syllables as contain either a long vowel, or a diphthong, or a vowel followed by two consonants.

The long vowels, as already stated, are either η and ω, which are always so, or α, ι, υ, which are so only in particular cases, and are therefore called doubtful : ε and ο are always short.

At the end of a word, however, both long vowels and diphthongs are commonly made short if the next word begins with a vowel.

When a vowel not long by nature is followed by two consonants of which the former is a mute and the latter a liquid, the syllable is in general held to be common : as, καθέδρα, kathedra, a chair.

To indicate the time of the doubtful vowels they are sometimes marked thus, ā, ī, ū, when long, and thus when short, ă, ĭ, ŭ.

On Tone or Accent.

The tone of a syllable is that note or elevation on the musical scale with which it is pronounced.

Every syllable is of necessity pronounced with some tone, but there is in every word one syllable which is commonly pronounced with a higher tone than any of the rest, and at the same time rather more forcibly. This is called the sharp or acute tone, (οξύς τόνος, oxys tonos) or the accent, and is marked by a little dash from right to left ; thus, ανθρώπων.

It is by this characteristic tone on one of the syllables that each separate word is distinguished, and from the variety that is given to it arises much of the emphasis of living speech.

Among the ancient Greeks, the place of the accent was in general determined by the quantity of the last syllable : if that was long it was placed on the last but one, if otherwise on the last but two, as in ἀνθρώπω, ἄνθρωπος.

Note.—As by this placing of the accent the effect of verse is to most modern ears rendered less agreeable, it is now common, in reading Greek, to be guided by the same rule which prevails in Latin, which hinges on the time of the last syllable but one, and is as follows: in dissyllables the accent is placed on the first syllable, and in longer words the accent will be on the last but one if that be long, and if not, on the last but two. Thus we now say, ἀνθρώπος, κύριον.

Sometimes on a long vowel or diphthong there is placed a double tone, the elevation or arsis (ἀρσις) being followed by a depression or thesis (θεσις). In this case the syllable is said to be perispômen (περισπωμενή, perispwmenè), or circumflex, and is marked thus, τιμάτε, timâte.

The perispômen is never found except either on the last syllable, or on the last but one, the last in this case being short.

Note.—In what regards the accents, αι and οι at the end of words are generally considered as short syllables.

There is a set of words whose accent was not regulated, as in the foregoing rule, by the quantity of the last syllable, but was fixed, without reference to that, either on the last syllable or the last but one; such are οξύς, sharp; ὀλίγος, little; εἰκῆ, rashly.

Note.—Words that have the accent on the last syllable are called oxyton, and those which have it on the last but one, paroxyton. Words which have no accent on the last syllable are called baryton.

When an oxyton is followed by another word, without any greater stop than a comma intervening, its tone is in some degree depressed, which is indicated by its mark being drawn from left to right ; as, εγὼ εἰμι. Something similar to this may be observed in the oxytons of our own language, such as herèin, therèðf, which nearly lose their accent when in close construction with other words.

There are certain words called enkliticks, which have no accent of their own, but are pronounced as if they were part of the preceding word, whose accent, if need be, is drawn forward to meet them ; as ανθρωπὸς τις, anthrwpòs tis, a certain man.

Note.—Enkliticks may be known by observing that the tone of oxytons is not depressed before them, as ὁ ἀνὴρ μου, ho anér mou, my husband.

Times and tones, with the marks by which they are denoted, were by the Greeks called prosodies (προσῳδία).

Of Synairesis or Contraction.

It is exceedingly common in Greek, when two or more vowels come together, to draw them into one long vowel or diphthong, or to omit one of them, so as to form but one syllable out of two : thus, for γελαετε we read γελᾶτε, for δηλωω, δηλῶ, and for τειχεος, τειχους.

The most common instances of contraction are the following :—

αε, αη into ᾱ.

εα, εη η.

εε, εῖ, ει.

εο, οε, οο, ου.

αο, οα, αω, εω, οω ω.

οῖ, οει οι.

Some others less common and less certain will be learnt by use.

When the letter ι has been dropped in a contraction, it is commonly written underneath, as in γελᾶς, from γελαις, thou laughest.

When of two syllables entering into a contraction, the former had the acute tone, the resulting syllable is always perispômen.

A vowel resulting from contraction is always long.

PART THE SECOND.

OF THE PARTS OF SPEECH.

The words of which language is composed belong to three principal divisions, namely, Nouns, Verbs, and Particles.

Nouns and verbs are declined, that is, they undergo certain significant changes in their terminations and otherwise, each in its proper manner : particles are not declined at all.

Of these classes there are nine subdivisions, called parts of speech : namely, nouns proper, adjectives, pronouns, verbs, participles, declined ; adverbs, prepositions, conjunctions, and interjections, undeclined.

1. A noun or name (ονομα) denotes the thing of which we speak.

2. An adjective or epithet (επιθετον) cannot stand alone, but is joined to a noun to show of what sort it is.

3. Pronouns (αντωνυμιαι) are words which serve in certain cases, instead of nouns.

4. Verbs (ρηματα) express facts or assertions, signifying of the noun whatever it is, or does, or suffers, and that with distinction of time. There must at least be one verb in every sentence.

5. Participles (μετοχαί) are intermediate between nouns and verbs, and partake of the nature of both, combining the form of the former with much of the signification of the latter.

6. Adverbs (επιρρηματα) are joined both to verbs and adjectives, in order in some way to qualify their signification.

7. Prepositions (προθεσεις) are prefixed to nouns, to express the relation in which they stand to some other word.

8. Conjunctions (συνδεσμοί) indicate for the most part the relations of verbs to each other, and serve to give to the successive portions of discourse a just connexion and emphasis.

9. Interjections are short unconnected words, thrown into discourse to express the emotions of the speaker.

OF NOUNS IN GENERAL.

To nouns of all kinds, including participles, belong the distinctions of gender (γενος), number (αριθμός), and case (πτῶσις).

The Genders are three, the masculine (αρσενικόν), the feminine (θηλυκόν), and the neuter (ουδετερον).

The masculine serves in general to express things male, and the feminine, things female: but numberless other things are also expressed in these genders as well as in the neuter.

The Numbers are also three, the singular (ἐνικὸς), the dual (δυσικὸς), and the plural (πληθυντικὸς).

The use of the dual is in speaking of things which occur in couples or pairs, as the hands or eyes; its employment however, is not very frequent, as the plural may always be used in the same cases.

The Cases are in general four, namely, the nominative, genitive, dative, and accusative. A fifth, but only of partial occurrence, is called the vocative.

The nominative or orthè (ορθή) indicates the subject of the verb, and is also much used in addresses.

The genitive or genick (γενικὴ) indicates that to which something else belongs, or from which it proceeds, and its force may commonly be expressed by of or from.

The dative or dotick (δοτικὴ) shows most commonly that a noun is in some way accessory to the action of a verb, whether it be as an instrument, or receiver, or in some other relation. Its force is for the most part expressed in English by to, for, with, or in.

The accusative or aitiatick (αιτιατικὴ) is chiefly employed for the noun which most immediately follows or is dependent on the verb: it serves also in some other relations.

The vocative or kletick (κλητικὴ) indicates the person whom the speaker addresses.

Obs. 1. In all neuter nouns the nominative and accusative are the same, and in the plural, if uncontracted, end in ă.

Obs. 2. In the dual there are never more than two cases, as the accusative is the same with the nominative, and the dative with the genitive.

Obs. 3. The vocative is found only in nouns of masculine or common termination, and in the singular number : it very commonly has prefixed to it the particle $\hat{\omega}$, and where there is no proper vocative, its place is supplied by prefixing this particle to the nominative.

OF NOUNS PROPER.

Nouns proper have three modes of declension or klisis ($\kappa\lambda\iota\sigma\iota\varsigma$), which are distinguished by the terminations of the two first cases singular.

The first Declension.

The first declension comprises nouns ending in α or η , and making the genitive in $\bar{\alpha}s$ or ηs , which are feminine ; and nouns ending in $\bar{\alpha}s$ or ηs , and making the genitive in $\omicron\nu$, which are masculine. The cases after the genitive singular are declined according to a common model as follows :

Sing.	N.	Τραπεζ- α , a table.
	G.	- ηs , of a table.
	D.	- η , to a table.
	A.	- $\alpha\nu$, a table.
Plur.	N.	- $\alpha\iota$, tables.
	G.	- $\hat{\omega}\nu$, of tables.
	D.	- $\alpha\iota\varsigma$, to tables.
	A.	- $\bar{\alpha}s$, tables.

When α in the nominative is preceded by a vowel or ρ, we find \bar{a} instead of η in the genitive and dative : as ποιητριᾶ a poetess, G. - $\bar{a}s$, D. - \bar{a} ; ταμίᾱ a steward, G. -ου, D. -α.

Note.—It is a general rule in Greek, to substitute α for η where a vowel or ρ have preceded.

Obs. 1. The accusative retains the vowel of the nominative in all instances : as λιμνη, a lake, A. -ην; ὥρα, an hour, A. -ᾶν.

Obs. 2. The genitive plural of this declension is always perispômen, and in oxyton nouns, the genitive and dative singular, and dative plural, are so likewise.

Obs. 3. The masculines make a vocative, generally in ᾶ, as ὦ ταμίᾶ, O steward; ὦ προφήτᾶ, O prophet : but some in ηs make η , as ὦ Δαρδανίδη, O son of Dardanos.

Obs. 4. Some nouns in $\bar{a}s$ make the genitive in \bar{a} , as βορρᾶ the north, G. \bar{a} .

Obs. 5. The poets have αο for ου in Gen. Sing. and αων for ὦν in the Gen. Plur. as Ατρεῖδαο, of Atreidès; μελισσαων, of bees.

The Second Declension.

The second declension comprizes nouns in os , which are generally masculine, but sometimes feminine, and nouns in $ον$, which are always neuter, all making the genitive in $ον$.

Sing.	N.	Λογ-ος,	a speech.
	G.	-ον,	of a speech.
	D.	-ῳ,	to a speech.
	A.	-ον,	a speech.

Plur. N. Λογ-οι, speeches.

G. -ων, of speeches.

D. -οις, to speeches.

A. -ους, speeches.

Neuters form the nominative plural in ᾶ, as προσωπον, a face, Pl. N. προσωπ-ᾶ.

Nouns in os have a vocative in ε, as ὦ λογε, O speech.

Note.—Both in this declension and the former, the dative plural ended originally in σι, as it does also in the third; but these forms, as τραπεζαῖσι and λογοῖσι, occur but rarely except in poetry. The poets also use οιο for ου in the Gen. Sing., as πολεμοιο, of war.

Nouns of this declension sometimes receive a new form from contraction: thus we have αδελφιδούς for αδελφιδέος, a nephew; πλούς for πλοος, a voyage; οστούν for οστέον, a bone.

Singular.

N. Αδελφιδ-οῦς.

G. -οῦ.

D. -ῶ.

A. -οῦν.

Plural.

N. Αδελφιδ-οῖ.

G. -ῶν.

D. -οῖς.

A. -οῦς.

Οστούν makes N. Pl. οστᾶ.

There are also some Attic forms in ωs and ων which retain ω through all their cases: such are νεῶς, a temple, instead of ναος; ανωγεων, an upper room, for ανωγειον.

The Third Declension.

The third declension comprizes nouns of various terminations, but all when uncontracted, distinguished by making the genitive in os, with the increase of a syllable.

Sing.	N.	Σωτήρ,	a savior.
	G.	-ος,	of a savior.
	D.	-ι,	to a savior.
	A.	-ᾶ,	a savior.
Plur.	N.	-ες,	saviors.
	G.	-ων,	of saviors.
	D.	-σι,	to saviors.
	A.	-ᾶς,	saviors.

Neuters, as usual, form the nominative plural in ā, as σῶμα, a body, G. σωματος; N. Pl. σωματα.

Note.—In monosyllables of this declension, the genitive and dative singular and dative plural are oxyton, and the genitive plural perispōmen: as χεῖρ, a hand, G. χειρὸς, D. χειρὶ; G. Pl. χειρῶν, D. χερσὶ.

Masculines and feminines in this declension have commonly a vocative, which is formed either by shortening a long vowel, as in ὦ Ἑκτορ, O Hector, from Ἑκτωρ; ὦ σῶτερ, O savior, from σωτηρ; ὦ Σωκράτης, O Socrates, from Σωκρατής; or by dropping a final s, as ὦ πολί, O town, from πολίς; ὦ βασιλεῦ, O king, from βασιλεὺς; or by dropping the termination of the genitive, as ὦ τάλαν, O wretch, from τάλας, G. τάλανος.

Some variety occurs in the formation of the dative plural. The general rule is to change the final os of the genitive singular into σι; but it must further be observed, that if either of the dental consonants τ, δ, θ, or ν, immediately precede, it is omitted, as in γονατος, of a knee, γονασι; ορνιθος, of a fowl, ορνισι; δαιμονος, of a daemon, δαιμοσι: while gutturals and labials form double letters, as κορακος, of a crow, κοραξι; Αραβος, of an Arab, Αραψι: and short vowels preceding ντ are lengthened, as λεοντος, of a lion, λεουσι; φωνηεντος, of a vowel, φωνηεισι.

Note.—Some are still more irregular, as χειρς, of a hand, χερσι; πατρς, of a father, πατράσι.

The poets often double the σ, as βελεσσι, with darts, for βελεσι; ποσσι, with the feet, for ποσί.

To the dative plural before a vowel ν is added for the sake of euphony, as σωτηρσιν ἡμῶν, to saviors of us.

The accusative singular in nouns in ις, υς, αυς, and ους, especially such as make the genitive in ος pure, generally ends in ν instead of α: as πολις, a town, A. πολιν; βοτρυς, a bunch of grapes, A. βοτρυν; γραῦς, an old woman, A. γραῦν; βοῦς, an ox, A. βοῦν. Some have both forms, as ερίς, contention, A. εριδα and εριν.

Contraction.

Many nouns in this declension occur principally in a form derived more or less from contraction, of which the following will serve as examples.

1. Nouns in ης and ος, making the genitive in εος or ους; as τριηρ-ης, -εος -ους, a galley; τειχ-ος, -εος -ους, a wall.

Singular.		Plural.
N.	Τριηρ-ης.	N.	Τριηρ-εις.
G.	- ους.	G.	- ῶν.
D.	- ει.	D.	- εσι.
A.	- η.	A.	- εις.

The neuter τειχος makes Pl. N. τειχη.

2. Nouns in ωs and ω, making the genitive in oos or ous; as αἰδ-ὠs, -όος -οῦs, modesty; πείθ-ὠ, -όος -οῦs, persuasion. N. αἰδ-ὠs, G. -οῦs, D. -οῖ, A. -ῶ. The plural hardly occurs.

3. Nouns in ιs, ι, υs, υ, making the genitive most commonly in eos or ews; as πολ-ιs, -εος -ews, a town; σιναπ-ι, -εος -ews, mustard; πέλεκ-υs, -εος -ews, an axe; αστ-υ, -εος -ews, a city.

Singular.	Plural.
N. Πολ-ιs.	N. Πολ-ειs.
G. -εωs.	G. -εων.
D. -ει.	D. -εσι.
A. -ιν.	A. -ειs.

The genitive αστεος, the neuter plurals σιναπεα and αστεα and the accusative plural πελεκεας, are most commonly found uncontracted.

Note.—In Ionic and the poets nouns in ιs and ι sometimes form the genitive in ιος.

4. Nouns in εὺs, making the genitive in ῆος or έως; as βασιλεὺs, -ῆος -έως, a king.

Singular.	Plural.
N. Βασιλ-εὺs.	N. Βασιλ-εῖs.
G. -έωs.	G. -έων.
D. -εῖ.	D. -εῦσι.
A. -έα.	A. -έας or -εῖs.

Analogous to this is the declension of a few nouns in -αυs. One of them is, ναῦs, a ship, G. νηὸs, νεὼs, D. νηῖ, A. ναῦν; Pl. N. νῆες, G. νεῶν, D. ναυσί, A. ναῦs.

5. Accusatives plural in oas and vas are generally contracted, as βοῦς for βοας, oxen; ἰχθῦς for ἰχθύας fishes.

6. Some neuter nouns in as, G. -ατος, as κρέας, flesh, drop the τ and are then further contracted; as, κρε-ᾶς, G. -ως, D. -α; Pl. N. κρε-ᾶ, G. -ῶν, D. -ᾶσι.

Note.—The uncontracted forms of all these nouns are common in the older poets and in the Ionic dialect.

Genders.

Many terminations in this declension are common both to the masculine and feminine genders, but others belong to one gender only.

Nouns in as, G. -αντος, αν, υν, and ευσ, are always masculine, as are also for the most part those in ην, ης, and ων.

Nouns in as, G. -αδος; ης, G. ητος; ιν, ις, υς, also in ως and ω, G. -οος or -ωος, are commonly feminine.

Those in α, ι, υ, ορ, ος, and αρ or ας, G. -ατος, are always neuter.

Dual Number of Nouns.

The two cases of the dual are readily formed from the genitive plural: the Nominative by changing the final ων into ᾶ in the first declension, into ω in the second, and into ε in the third; and the Genitive by changing it into αιν in the first declension, and into οιν in the second and third : as, τραπεζ-ῶν, -ᾶ, -αιν ; λογ-ων, -ω, -οιν ; σωτηρ-ων, -ε, -οιν.

Irregular Nouns.

Nouns have many further varieties and irregularities : some are made up as if from different nominatives, as νῶτος, the back, Pl. νῶτα, as if from νῶτον ; Zeus, the chief deity, G. Διὸς ; γυνή, a woman, G. γυναικὸς ; οναρ, a dream, G. ονειρατος. Some are unused in one of the numbers, as νοῦς, understanding, αἰδὼς, modesty, used only in the singular ; αγκαὶ, the bended arms, only in the plural. Some are altogether aptôt or undeclined, as καρα, the head, σελας, light. Others are redundant in some cases, as ρις or ριν, the nose ; θεμις, night, G. θεμιτος, θεμιδος, or θεμιστος ; ερις, strife, A. εριδα and εριν.

Similar instances might be multiplied, but things of this kind will better be learnt by use than by many rules with many exceptions.

OF ADJECTIVES.

Most of these words have distinct terminations for each of the three genders ; many, however, have the masculine and feminine in one, and some have no neuter. They are all declined in the same manner as nouns proper, falling under the several declensions according to their terminations.

The following is an example of the most common form.

Singular.			Plural.
M.	F.	N.	M.	F.	N.
N. Πρωτ-ος, -η, -ον.			N. Πρωτ-οι, -αι, -ᾶ.
G. -ου, -ης, -ου.			G. -ων, -ων, -ων.
D. -ῳ, -ῇ, -ῳ.			D. -οις, -αῖς, -οῖς.
A. -ον, -ην, -ον.			A. -ους, -ᾶς, -ᾶ.

Note.—In adjectives of this form, the feminine of the genitive plural is not perispōmen, as it is in nouns proper.

The following synopsis exhibits the principal varieties.

1. With three endings.

Πρωτ-ος, -η, -ον, first.

G. -ου, -ης, -ου.

Ἁγί-ος, -ᾶ, -ον, holy.

G. -ου, -ᾶς, -ου.

Μελ-ᾶς, -αινᾶ, -ᾶν, black.

G. -ᾶνος, -αινης, -ᾶνος.

Τερ-ην, -εινα, -εν, tender.

G. -ενος, -εινης, -ενος.

Ἀπλ-οῦς, -ῆ, -οῦν, simple.

G. -οῦ, -ῆς, -οῦ.

Οξ-ὺς, -εῖα, -ὺ, sharp.

G. -έος, -εῖᾶς, -έος.

Ἄπ-ās, -ᾶσα, -αν, all.
 G. -αντος, -ασης, -αντος.

Χαρι-εις, -εισα, -εν, graceful.
 G. -εντος, -εισης, -εντος.

2. With only two endings, the first being both masculine and feminine, and the third neuter.

Ενδοξ-ος, -ον, renowned.
 G. -ου.

Μειζ-ων, -ον, greater.
 G. -ονος.

Ευχαρ-ις, -ι, graceful.
 G. -ιτος.

Διπ-ους, -ουν, dipod, or two-footed.
 G. -οδος.

Αδακρ-υς, -υ, tearless.
 G. -υος.

Αληθ-ής, ἐς, true.
 G. -έος or -οῦς.

3. With only one ending, and wanting the neuter.

Απατ-ωρ, fatherless. Φυγ-ας, fugitive.
 G. -ορος. G. -αδος.

Μεγας, great, and πολὺς, much, are irregular.

Μεγ-ᾱς, -άλη, -ᾱ.	Πολ-ὺς, -λή, -ὺ.
G. -άλου, -άλης, -άλου.	G. -λουῦ, -λῆς, -λουῦ.
D. -άλῳ, -άλῃ, -άλῳ.	D. -λῶ, -λῇ, -λῶ.
A. -ᾱν, -άλην, -ᾱ.	A. -ὺν, -λήν, -ὺ.

The plurals μεγάλοι and πολλοὶ are regular.

Comparison.

For the purpose of comparison, adjectives have forms which are called degrees: of these there are three, the positive or thetick, the comparative or synkritick, and the superlative or hyperthetick.

To form these degrees, adjectives in os and us replace their final s by -τερος and -τατος; as, λευκός, white; λευκότερος, whiter; λευκοτατος, whitest.

εὐρύς, broad; ευρυτερος, broadier; ευρυτατος, broadest.

If the syllable before the last be short, instead of -οτερος -οτατος we find -ωτερος -ωτατος; as, σοφός, wise; σοφώτερος, σοφώτατος.

Those in ᾱς and ης annex -τερος and -τατος to the neuter; as, μέλας, black; μελαντερος, μελαντατος.

αληθής, true; αληθεστερος, αληθεστατος.

Those in εις change -εις into -εστερος and -εστατος; as, χαρίεις, graceful; χαριεστερος, χαριεστατος.

Those in ων add these endings to the neuter; as, σωφρών, sober; σωφρονεστερος, σωφρονεστατος.

Less regular forms are such as follow:

φίλος, dear; φίλτερος or φιλαιτερος, φίλτατος or φιλαιτατος.

ἀπλοῦς, simple; ἀπλουστερος, ἀπλουστατος.

ἄρπαξ, rapacious; ἄρπαγιστερος, ἄρπαγιστατος.

λαλος, talkative; λαλιστερος, λαλιστατος.

ἡδὺς, pleasant; ἡδιων, ἡδιστος: but ἡδυτερος, ἡδυτατος are also used.

καλὸς, fair; καλλίων, καλλιστος.

αἰσχρὸς, shameful; αἰσχιων, αἰσχιστος.

ἀγαθὸς, good; { βελτιων, βελτιστος;
or ἀμεινων, ἀριστος.

κακὸς, bad; { κακιων, κακιστος;
or χειρων, χειριστος.

μεγας, great; μειζων, μεγιστος.

μικρὸς, small; ελασσων or ελαττων, ελαχιστος.

πολὺς, much; πλειων or πλεων, πλεῖστος.

ολίγος, little; μειων, ολιγιστος.

ῥαδιος, easy; ῥαων, ῥᾶστος.

In some cases the positive is wholly wanting, the other degrees seeming to have been formed at once from nouns proper, verbs, or particles: as, κρεισσων or κρειππων, more excellent; κρατιστος, from κρατος, strength: λωιων or λφων, more desireable; λῶστος, from λῶ, I wish: φερτερος, preferable or nobler; φερτατος and φεριστος, from φερειν, to bear: κατωτερος, lower; κατωτατος, from κατω, below: προτερος, former; πρῶτος, first, from προ before.

ἥσσω or ἥττων, inferior or weaker, has neither positive nor superlative.

There are many other anomalies which will best be learnt in reading.

In the declension of comparatives in ων certain contractions often occur ; as from μειζων, Sing. Acc. μειζονα or μειζω. [μειζω.

Plur. Nom. μειζονες or μειζους : Neut. μειζονα or

Acc. μειζονας or μειζους.

NUMERALS.

Synopsis of Numerals.

εἰς	1	εἰκοσι	20
δυο	2	τριακοντα	30
τρῆις	3	τεσσαρακοντα	40
τεσσαρες	4	πεντηκοντα	50
πεντε	5	ἑξηκοντα	60
ἑξ	6	ἑβδομηκοντα	70
ἑπτὰ	7	ογδοηκοντα	80
οκτώ	8	εννενηκοντα	90
εννέα	9	ἑκατὸν	100
δεκα	10	διακοσιοι	200
ένδεκα	11	τριακοσιοι	300
δωδεκα	12	τετρακοσιοι	400
τρισκαιδεκα	13	πεντακοσιοι	500
τεσσαρεσκαιδεκα	14	ἑξακοσιοι	600
πεντεκαιδεκα	15	ἑπτακοσιοι	700
έκκαιδεκα	16	οκτακοσιοι	800
ἑπτακαιδεκα	17	εννακοσιοι	900
οκτωκαιδεκα	18	χιλιοι	1000
εννεακαιδεκα	19	μυρῖοι	10,000

πρῶτος, first.	ἑβδομος, seventh. δεύτερος, second.	ογδοός, eighth. τρίτος, third.	ἐννατός, ninth. τέταρτος, fourth.	δέκατος, tenth. πέμπτος, fifth.	εικοστός, twentieth. ἕκτος, sixth.

And so on, as τριακοστός, thirtieth; ἑκατοστός, hundredth; διακοσιοστός, two hundredth; χιλιοστός, one thousandth; μυριοστός, ten thousandth.

From the above forms several others are derived, as ἓν, the number one; δύο, τρία, δέκα, and so on: διπλοῦς, double; τριπλοῦς, triple, &c.: διπλασιος, twice as much; τριπλασιος, thrice as much, &c.: also δευτεραίος, on the second day; τριταίος, on the third day, &c. There is also a set of numeral adverbs, as ἅπαξ, once; δις, twice; τρίς, thrice; τετράκις, four times; δεκάκις, ten times; ἑκατοντάκις, a hundred times, &c.

Declension of Numerals.

From πέντε to ἑκατόν, inclusive, the primary numerals are not declined. Of the others only the following require to be noticed.

N. Εἷς, μία, έν.

G. ἐνός, μιᾶς, ενός, &c.

Δύο, two, agrees with plural nouns in all cases and genders; but sometimes as a dative δυσὶ is used: δύο is also used with duals in the nominative and accusative. Δυοῖν is used with duals as a genitive and dative.

N. Τρεῖς, τρια,

G. τριῶν,

D. τρισί,

A. τρεῖς, τρια,

N. Τεσσαρες, τεσσαρα,

G. τεσσαρων,

D. τεσσαρσι,

A. τεσσαρας, τεσσαρα.

The remaining numerals are declined with three terminations like common adjectives.

OF PRONOUNS.

Pronouns serve to speak of things under some general relation in which they stand to the speaker or the discourse, without mentioning their names. They are divided into several classes, as follows :

1. Personal.

εγὼ, *I.*συ, *thou.*ὁ, ἡ, το, *he, she, it.*αυτ-ὸς, -ῆ, -ὸ, he, she, it.

2. Demonstrative.

ὁδε, ἡδε, τοδε, *this.*οὗτος, αὕτη, τοῦτο, *this.*εκείν-ος, -η, -ο, that.

3. Reflective.

οὔ, *of himself.*εμαυτ-οὔ, -ῆς, -οὔ, *of myself.*σεαυτ-οὔ or σαυτ-οὔ, -ῆς, -οὔ, *of thyself.*ἐαυτ-οὔ or αὐτ-οὔ, -ῆς, -οὔ, *of himself or oneself.*αλληλ-ων, of one another.

4. *Relative.*ὅς, ἡ, ὃ, *who or which.*ὅστις, ἡτίς, ὅτι, *who, whoever.*5. *Indefinite or Interrogative.*τις, τι, *some one, something.*τις; τι; *who? what?*6. *Possessive.*ἐμ-ὸς, -ῆ, -ὸν, *mine.*σος, ση, σου, *thine.*νωιτερ-ος, -α, -ον, *of us two.*σφωιτερ-ος, -α, -ον, *of you two.*ἡμετερ-ος, -α, -ον, *ours.*ὑμετερ-ος, -α, -ον, *yours.*ἐὸς or ὅς, -η, -ον, *his own.*σφετερ-ος, -α, -ον, their own.

Of these, νωιτερος, σφωιτερος, and ἐὸς or ὅς are poetic.

These Pronouns are declined as follows.

Sing. N. Εγὼ, I.

G. ἐμοῦ or μου, of me.

D. ἐμοὶ or μοι, to me.

A. ἐμέ or με, me.

Dual. N. νῶ, we two.

G. νῶν, of us two.

Plur. N. ἡμεῖς, we.

G. ἡμῶν, of us.

D. ἡμῖν, to us.

A. ἡμᾶς, us.

Note.—Μου, μοι, με are enklitics, as the oblique cases of σὺ may also be. In poetry for ἐμοῦ we find ἐμέο, ἐμεῖο, ἐμεῦ, and ἐμέθεν; and for ἡμεῖς, ἡμῖν, ἡμᾶς, we read αἶμες, αἶμμι, αἶμμε: together with other varieties.

Sing. N. Συ, thou.

G. σου, of thee.

D. σοι, to thee.

A. σε, thee.

Dual. N. σφῶ, ye two.

G. σφῶν, of you two.

Plur. N. ὑμεῖς, ye.

G. ὑμῶν, of you.

D. ὑμῖν, to you.

A. ὑμᾶς, you.

Note.—In poetry τυ for συ is common: also σεο, σείω, σεῦ, σεθεν for σου; and υῖμες, υῖμμι, υῖμμε for ὑμεῖς, ὑμῖν, ὑμᾶς.

Singular.	Dual.	Plural.
N. Ὁ, ἡ, το.	Τω.	Οἱ, αἱ, τᾶ.
G. τοῦ, τῆς, τοῦ.	τοῖν.	τῶν, τῶν, τῶν.
D. τῷ, τῇ, τῷ.		τοῖς, ταῖς, τοῖς.
A. τον, την, το.		τους, τας, τᾶ.

Note.—The proper feminine form of the dual τα, ταῖν, is little used.

This pronoun is constantly prefixed to nouns in the force of the definite article the: as, ὁ ἀνὴρ, the man; ἡ γυνή, the woman; το πρᾶγμα, the affair.

Αὐτὸς is declined like adjectives of three endings. This pronoun, when in the nominative, or joined with another pronoun, is seldom simply personal, but rather emphatic, signifying self or same.

Ὁ αὐτὸς means the same, and from this by syncope come ταυτοῦ, ταυτῷ, ταυτὸν, ταυτό.

Note.—For the accusative singular, αὐτόν, -ήν, -ό, there are poetic forms μιν and νιν of all genders.

Οὗτος was originally ὁ αὐτός, but is declined in a peculiar manner.

Singular.Plural.

N.	Οὗτος, αὐτή, τοῦτο.	Οὔτοι, αὐται, ταῦτα.
G.	τουτου, ταυτης, τουτου.	τουτων, τουτων, τουτων.
D.	τουτω, ταυτη, τουτω.	τουτοις, ταυταις, τουτοις.
A.	τοῦτον, ταυτην, τοῦτο.	τουτους, ταυτας, ταῦτα.

Note.—It may assist the memory to observe, that wherever α or η are found in the article, the first syllable of this word takes αυ instead of ου.

The reflective pronouns for the most part want the nominative.

Sing. G. οὔ, of himself.

D. οἱ, to himself.

A. ἐ, himself.

Dual. N. σφω, themselves.

G. σφωλιν, of themselves (of two.)

Plur. N. σφεῖς, themselves.

G. σφῶν, of themselves.

D. σφισι, to themselves.

A. σφᾶς, themselves.

Note.—In the poets we find έο, είω, εύ, έθεν, for οὔ; σφε for ἐ, and σφι or σφιν both for οἱ and σφισι: nor is the pronoun confined to the reflective sense, but is often used as a simple personal.

Εμαυτοῦ and σεαυτοῦ have only the singular: but ἐαυτοῦ has the plural except the nominative, which is also wanting in αλληλων.

Τις, τι, G. τινος is declined like adjectives of two endings. Ὅστις declines both its parts, as, N. ὅστις, ἥτις, ὅτι; G. οὗτινος, ἡστινος, οὗτινος, &c. But for τινος and τινι we often find του and τω, and ὅτου, ὅτω for οὗτινος, ᾧτινι: also, after words ending in a, αττα for τινα in the plural, while ᾅττα is used for ᾅτινα.

To the indefinite pronouns belongs also δεῖνα, which implies a certain person or thing, or as we say, such a one, without naming him. It is always used with the article, as, ὁ, ἡ, το, δεῖνα, G. τοῦ, τῆς, τοῦ, δεῖνος, &c. Sometimes it is used as if undeclined.

There remain to be noticed some words bordering in their nature both on pronouns and adjectives, and which may therefore be called Pronominal Adjectives. Such are the following:

αλλ-ος, -η, -ο and -ον, other, different.

ἕτερ-ος, -α, -ον, other of two.

ἕκαστ-ος, -η, -ον, each, every one.

ἕκατερ-ος, -α, -ον, each of two, both the one and the other.

ἀμφω, G. ἀμφοῖν, and ἀμφοτερ-οι, -αι, -α, both.

οὐδεὶς, οὐδεμία, οὐδὲν, no one, nothing.

οὐτις, οὐτι, no one, nothing.

οὐδετερ-ος, -α, -ον, neither.

There are little systems formed by certain of the pronouns and pronominal adjectives which deserve notice. Each of the primary or definite relatives gives birth to a corresponding demonstrative, an indefinite and interrogative, and an indefinite relative.

Thus we have,

1. ὅς, whō, rel. def.

ὁ, he, demonstr.

τις, some one, indef.

τις; who? interrog.

ὅστις, who, whoever, rel. indef.

Note.—An appendage to this system is ποτερός, one of two.

ποτερος; which of the two? whether?

ὅποτερος, whether, whichever of the two.

2. οἷος, such as.

τοῖος, such.

ποιός, of some kind.

ποῖος; of what kind?

ὅποῖος, such as, of whatever kind.

3. ὅσος, as much as.

τοσος, so much.

ποσός, of some quantity.

ποσος; how much?

ὅπόσος, as much as, however much.

4. ἡλίκος, as large as.

τηλίκος, so large.

πηλίκος, of some size.

πηλίκος; how large?

ὀπηλίκος, as large as, of whatever size.

Each of the foregoing demonstratives, by combining with αὐτός and with the particle δε, produces again two others ; as οὗτος, ὅδε, this ; τοιοῦτος, τοιόσδε, such as this ; τοσοῦτος, τοσόσδε, so much as this ; τηλικούτος, τηλικόσδε, so large as this. They are all declined in the same manner as οὗτος and ὅδε.

Note.—To all the demonstratives throughout all their cases an ι is frequently added, which is about equivalent to here and there when annexed to the corresponding words in English ; as ὅδι, οὔτοσι, this here ; ἐκεῖνι, that there ; τοιουτοῖ, such as these here.

The indefinite relatives take οὖν after them, corresponding to the English addition of ever ; as ὅστισοῦν, whoever ; ὅποιοσοῦν, of what sort soever, &c.

OF VERBS.

The Greek Verb, for richness, precision, and euphony, is probably unrivalled in any language, and may justly be regarded as the highest attainment of man in the art of speech.

With respect to their sense, verbs are said in general to be either active, passive, neuter, or reflective. When they represent their subject as affecting, or acting on, some other thing, they are said to be active or energetick ; when they represent their subject as affected, or acted on, by some other thing, they are said to be passive or pathetick : when they attribute to their subject such an action as terminates in itself without particularly affecting any thing, they are called neuter ; lastly, when the subject is represented as affecting itself by its own action, they are said to be reflective or middle.

With respect, however, to their forms of declension verbs are of two kinds only, namely, the active and the passive, if we include in the latter a partial formation expressive of the neuter and middle senses. In general, the active form serves for the active and neuter senses, and the passive for the passive and reflective senses.

The Verb is declined in respect to Tense, Mood, Number, and Person.

Of the Tenses.

To verbs, both active and passive, belong several tenses, by the use of which the action is referred to some certain time.

The principal or leading tenses in each voice are four, namely, the present, future, aurist, and parakeimen.

The Present represents the action as still going on, and therefore unfinished, either at the time of speaking or at some other time to which the discourse refers.

To the present belongs the imperfect or paratatick, which is of the same description.

Note.—These tenses are also much used in describing the habits and properties of things.

The Future represents an action as about to be accomplished at some future time: it also serves in many instances to express commands.

The Aurist speaks of an action as already accomplished, and therefore past, but this may be either with respect to the time of speaking, or such other time as the discourse connects it with.

The Parakeimen combines both a past and present signification, representing the action indeed as past, but its result or effect as still remaining. As examples of its force take τεθνάναι, to be dead; ἐστάναι, tò stand; μεμνημαι, I remember; οἶδα, I know; σεσηπεν, it is rotten; εληλυθα, I am come; νενικημαι, I am conquered. So also γεγραφα, I have written, which implies the existence of the writing at the time of speaking.

To the parakeimen belongs the hypersyntelick, which has a similar force; as ετεθνηκει, he was dead; ηδειν, I knew.

The whole of the above tenses are common both to the active and passive forms; but in the passive, besides an additional future and aorist for the middle sense, there is also found an additional future called future met' oligon.

The Future met' oligon is an appendage to the parakeimen, representing the result of an action as about to be existing at some future time referred to; as γεγραψεται, it shall be written; implying that at such a time the writing shall be in existence.

The middle tenses sometimes imply that the agent does the action properly to or on himself, as λουσασθαι, to wash oneself; but at others only that he does it for himself, or so as in some way more particularly to concern himself; as λυσασθαι, to loose for oneself, that is, to ransom or deliver. Sometimes, also, they express a simple neuter sense, as δραμοῦμαι, I will run.

Note.—Our English idiom presents a like variety to that above; thus we say, I cut myself, and I cut myself a stick, in two different senses.

Of the Moods.

The Moods afford us the means of speaking of the action in a proper manner, according to the view with which we contemplate it.

The Infinitive or aparempbat speaks of the action abstractedly from the subject, and approaches in nature to a noun.

The Indicative or horistick expresses assertions of almost every kind.

The Optative or euktick expresses wishes and possibilities, the designs of past and consequences of hypothetick events. It is commonly represented in English by might, would, or should.

The Subjunctive or hypotactick expresses existing designs, hypotheses, resolutions, and exhortations: it may most frequently be rendered by may.

The Imperative or prostactick expresses commands and entreaties.

Note.—Not every tense has every mood, but some more, some fewer, as will presently appear. The indicative, however, is found in all, and it is in this mood that the proper force of the tenses will most easily be perceived.

It is impossible to express in English all the shades of meaning which belong to the several parts of the Greek verb; nor is it only in expression that we fail, but the di-distinctions themselves are sometimes such as we are not accustomed to make, and do not very readily apprehend. In particular, the distinction between the present and aorist in all moods, except the indicative, is of this description, and a single English form, which we call the present, is in general obliged to serve for both.

Sometimes two or more distinct verbs are required to express in English the force of the different tenses of a single Greek verb : thus, εἰκεῖν, to yield to, parak. εοικέναι, to resemble ; ἰστάναι, to set, parak. ἑστάναι, to stand ; λυεῖν to loosen, aor. mid. λυσασθαι, to ransom or deliver.

Of the Numbers and Persons.

All moods but the infinitive are declined in number and person, by which they are made to indicate distinctly their proper subjects.

They have three numbers corresponding with those of nouns.

They have also in each number three persons. The first person is used when the subject is the speaker ; the second when it is the person spoken to ; and the third in all other cases.

Note.—The distinction of persons is extended to nouns also, when they are considered as the subjects of verbs. A noun in the place of the speaker is said to be in the first person, the party addressed in the second, and whatever is spoken of in the third. Hence εγω must always be in the first person, and συ in the second ; other nouns are generally in the third ; but if used in the vocative case they are in the second.

In the imperative mood, the first person is wanting.

Of the Participle.

The participle is so closely connected with the verb both in sense and formation, that it is commonly exhibited together with it and as a part of it.

Each principal tense of the Greek verb has its proper participle, and there is besides the participle in τεος, which does not particularly belong to any.

All the participles are declined with number, case, and gender, like nouns adjective.

The Verb ΕΙΝΑΙ, to be ;

which, though irregular and defective, nevertheless on account of its great use, is proper to be learnt in the first instance.

PRESENT TENSE.

Infinitive.

Εἶναι, to be.

Indicative.

Sing. Εἰμὶ, I am.

εἶ, thou art.

ἐστὶ, he, she, or it, is.

Plur. ἐσμὲν, we are.

εἰστέ, ye or you are.

εἰσὶ, they are.

IMPERFECT TENSE.

Indicative.

Sing. Ἦν, or ημην, I was.

ἦς, or ἦσθα, thou wast.

ἦν, he was.

Plur. ἡμεν, we were.
 ἦτε, ye were.
 ἦσαν, they were.

Present Optative.

Sing. Εἴην, I might, would, or should be.
 εἴης, thou mightest be.
 εἴη, he might be.
Plur. εἴημεν, we might be.
 εἴητε, ye might be.
 εἴησαν, or εἶεν, they might be.

Subjunctive.

Sing. ᾧ, I may be.
 ᾗς, thou mayst be.
 ᾗ, he may be.
Plur. ᾧμεν, we may be.
 ᾗτε, ye may be.
 ᾧσι, they may be.

Imperative.

Sing. Ἴσθι, be thou.
 ἔστω, let him be.
Plur. ἔστε, be ye.
 ἔστωσαν, or ἔστων, let them be.

Participle.

ὄν, οὖσα, ὄν, being.
 G. ὄντος, οὖσης, ὄντος.

FUTURE TENSE.

Infinitive.

Εσεσθαι, to be about to be.

Indicative.

Sing. Εσομαι, I shall or will be.

εση, thou shalt be.

εσται, he shall be.

Plur. εσομεθα, we shall be.

εσεσθε, ye shall be.

εσονται, they shall be.

Optative.

Sing. Εσοιμην, I should or would be.

εσοιο, thou shouldst be.

εσοιτο, he should be.

Plur. εσοιμεθα, we should be.

εσοισθε, ye should be.

εσουντο, they should be.

Participle.

Εσομενος, -η, -ον, about to be.

Note.—The poetic variations of this verb are numerous ; among the most common are εμμεναι for εἶναι ; εμμι for εἰμι ; εσσι for εἶ ; εασι for εἰσι ; εσσο for ἰσθι ; ἐὼν, εὐσα, ἐὸν for ὦν, οὔσα, ον ; and εσεται or εσσεται for εσται.

PARADEIGMA OF THE REGULAR VERB.

Synopsis of the principal tenses, arranged according to their formation from one another.

Note.—The foregoing table is intended, 1st, to distinguish between the invariable base of each tense and its variable termination: 2dly, to show what tenses have a common base, as λυ-ειν, -εσθαι: 3dly, to show the order and manner in which the bases of the several tenses are formed from one another: and lastly, to exhibit the termination of each tense in the infinitive mood, from which all the other parts will be derived.

The base of the future and aorist is generally the same, but not always.

Synoptical View of the Declension of the Tenses, through their Moods and Participles.

ACTIVE VOICE.

	INFINITIVE.	INDICAT.	OPTAT.	SUBJUNCT.	IMPERAT.	PARTICIPLE.
Imperfect. } Present.	Λυ-ειν, to loose.	{ -ω, ε——ον.	-οιμι.	-ω.	-ε.	-ων.
Future.	Λυσ-ειν, to be about to loose.	-ω.	-οιμι.			-ων.
Aorist.	Λῦσ-αι, to have loosed.	ε——α.	-αιμι.	-ω.	-ον.	-ας.
Parak. ppers.	Λέλυκ-έναι, to have loosed.	{ -α. ε——ειν.	-οιμι.	-ω.		-ώς.

PASSIVE VOICE.

	INFINITIVE.	INDICAT.	OPTAT.	SUBJUNCT.	IMPERAT.	PARTICIPLE.
Present. Imperfect.	Λυ-εσθαι, to be loosed.	{ ε—ομην. -ομαι.	-οιμην.	-ωμαι.	-ου.	-ομενος.
Fut. mid.	Λυσ-εσθαι, to be about to loose oneself.	-ομαι.	-οιμην.			-ομενος.
Aor. mid.	Λυσ-ασθαι, to have loosed oneself.	ε—αμην.	-αιμην.	-ωμαι.	-αι.	-αμενος.
Parak. Hypers.	Λελυ-σθαι, to be loosed.	{ μαι. ε—μην.			-σο.	-μένος.
Fut. metol.	Λελυσ-εσθαι, to be about to be loosed.	-ομαι.	-οιμην.			-ομενος.
Aor. pass.	Λυθ-ῆναι, to have been loosed.	ε—ην.	-ειην.	-ω.	-ητι.	-είς.
Fut. pass.	Λυθῃσ-εσθαι, to be about to be loosed.	-ομαι.	-οιμην.			-ομενος.

Note.—The terminations of the future are perfectly similar to those of the present in both voices, except that the future wants the subjunctive and imperative moods.

Declension of the moods through the numbers and persons, and of the participles.

ACTIVE VOICE.

INDICATIVE MOOD.

Sing.

Plur.

Present Tense.

Λυ-ω, I loose, or am losing. -ομεν.

-εις. -ετε.

-ει. -ουσι.

Imperfect.

Ελυ-ον, I loosed, or was losing. -ομεν.

-ες. -ετε.

-ε. -ον.

Future.

Λυσ-ω, I shall or will loose.

[Like the Present.

Aorist.

Ελυσ-α, I loosed, or have loosed. -αμεν.

-ας. -ατε.

-ε. -αν.

Parakeimen.

Λελυκ-α, I have loosed. -αμεν.

-ας. -ατε.

-ε. -ασι.

Sing.		Plur.
	Hypersyntelick.
Ελελυκ-ειν,	I had loosed.	-ειμεν.
-εις.		-ειτε.
-ει.		-εσαν or -εισαν.

OPTATIVE MOOD.

Sing.		Plur.
	Present Tense.
Λυ-οιμι,	I might loose.	-οιμεν.
-οις.		-οιτε.
-οι.		-οιεν.
	Future.
Λυσ-οιμι,	I should or would loose.
		[Like the Present.
	Aorist.
Λυσ-αιμι,	I might loose or	-αιμεν.
	have loosed.
-ειας or -αις.		-αιτε.
-ειε or -αι.		-ειαν or -αιεν.

Parakeimen.

Λελυκ-οιμι,	I might have loosed.
		[Like the Present.

SUBJUNCTIVE MOOD.

Sing.		Plur.
	Present Tense.
Λυ-ω,	I may loose.	-ωμεν.
-ης.		-ητε.
-η.		-ωσι.

Aorist.

Λυσ-ω, I may loose or have loosed.

[Like the Present.

Parakeimen.

Λελυκ-ω, I may have loosed.

[Like the Present.

IMPERATIVE MOOD.

Sing.

Plur.

Present Tense.

Λυ-ε, loose thou.

-ετε.

-ετω.

-ετωσαν or -οντων.

Aorist.

Λυσ-ον, loose thou.

-ατε.

-ατω.

-ατωσαν or -αντων.

PARTICIPLES.

Present.

Λυ-ων, -ουσα, -ον, loosing.

G. -οντος, -ουσης, -οντος.

Future.

Λυσ-ων, about to loose.

[Like the Present.

Aorist.

Λυσ-ās, -āσα, -αν, having loosed.

G. -αντος, -ασης, -αντος.

Parakeimen.

Λελυκ-ώς, -ῦια, -ὸς, having loosed.

G. -ότος, -ύιας, -ότος.

PASSIVE VOICE.

INDICATIVE MOOD.

Sing.Plur.Present Tense.

Λυ-ομαι,	I am loosed.	-ομεθα.
-η		-εσθε.
-έται.		-ονται.

Imperfect.

Ελυ-ομην,	I was loosed.	-ομεθα.
-ου.		-εσθε.
-ετο.		-οντο.

Future Middle.

Λυσ-ομαι, I shall loose myself.

[Like the Present.

Aorist Middle.

Ελυσ-αμην,	I loosed myself.	-αμεθα.
-ω.		-ασθε.
-ατο.		-αντο.

Parakeimén.

Λελυ-μαι,	I am or have been	-μεθα.
	loosed.
-σαι.		-σθε.
-ται.		-νται.

Hypersyntelick.

Ελελυ-μην,	I was or had been	-μεθα.
	loosed.
-σο.		-σθε.
-το.		-ντο.

Future Metol.

Λελυσ-ομαι, I shall be loosed.

[Like the Present.

Aorist Passive.

Ελυθ-ην, I was or h. been loosed. -ημεν.

-ης,

-ητε.

-η,

-ησαν.

Future Passive.

Λυθησ-ομαι, I shall be loosed.

[Like the Present.

OPTATIVE MOOD.

Present Tense.

Λυ-οιμην, I might be loosed. -οιμεθα.

-οιο,

-οισθε.

-οιτο,

-οιντο.

Future Middle.

Λυσ-οιμην, I should or would loose myself.

[Like the Present.

Aorist Middle.

Λυσ-αιμην, I might l. myself. -αιμεθα.

-αιο,

-αισθε.

-αιτο,

-αιντο.

Future Metol.

Λελυσ-οιμην, I should or would be loosed.

[Like the Present.

Aorist Passive.

Λυθ-ειην, I might be loosed. -ειημεν.

-ειης,

-ειητε.

-ειη,

-ειησαν or -εῖεν.

Future Passive.

Λυθησ-οιμην, I should or would be loosed.

[Like the Present.

SUBJUNCTIVE MOOD.

Present Tense.

Λυ-ωμαι, I may be loosed. -ωμεθα.

-η, -ησθε.

-ηται, -ωνται.

Aorist Middle.

Λυσ-ωμαι, I may loose myself.

[Like the Present.

Aorist Passive.

Λυθ-ῶ, I may be loosed. -ῶμεν.

-ῆς, -ῆτε.

-ῆ, -ῶσι.

IMPERATIVE MOOD.

Present Tense.

Λυ-ου, be thou loosed. -εσθε.

-εσθω, -εσθωσαν or -εσθων.

Aorist Middle.

Λυσ-αι, loose thyself. -ασθε.

-ασθω, -ασθωσαν or -ασθων.

Parakeimen.

Λελυ-σο, be thou loosed. -σθε.

-σθω, -σθωσαν or -σθων.

Aorist Passive.

Λυθ-ητι, be thou loosed. -ητε.

-ητω, -ητωσαν or -ητων.

PARTICIPLES.

Present.

Λυ-ομενος, -η, -ον, loosed, or being loosed.

Future Middle.

Λυσ-ομενος, -η, -ον, about to loose oneself.

Aorist Middle.

Λυσ-αμενος, -η, -ον, having loosed oneself.

Parakeimen.

Λελυ-μένος, -η, -ον, loosed.

Future Metol.

Λελυσ-ομενος, -η, -ον, about to be loosed.

Aorist Passive.

Λυθ-εις, -είσα, -έν, having been loosed.

G. -έντος, &c.

Future Passive.

Λυθησ-ομενος, -η, -ον, about to be loosed.

Participle in τεος.

Λυ-τέος, -α, -ον, that must or ought to be loosed.

Note on the Analogy of the foregoing Declensions.

Although the declensions just exhibited present a good deal of variety, yet there is in fact a close analogy prevailing throughout, which it will be worth the student's while to notice. There are in short only two essentially different forms, the one for the active voice, the other for the passive ; and three modifications of each of these constitute in effect the whole system. They are well displayed in the tenses transcribed below, the essential parts being distinguished by capitals. The first modification serves for the present and future tenses of the indicative, and for the whole of the subjunctive : the second for the past tenses of the indicative, and for the optative : the third for the imperative.

The Active Form.

1. λελυκ-α, -αΣ, -ε. Pl. -αΜΕΝ, -αΤΕ, -αΣΙ.
2. ελελυκ-ειΝ, -ειΣ, -ει. Pl. -ειΜΕΝ, -ειΤΕ, -ειΣΑΝ.
3. λυ -ε, -εΤΩ. Pl. -εΤΕ, -ΕΤΩΣΑΝ.

The Passive Form.

1. λελυ-ΜΑΙ, -ΣΑΙ, -ΤΑΙ. Pl. -ΜΕΘΑ, -ΣΘΕ, -ΝΤΑΙ.
2. ελελυ-ΜΗΝ, -ΣΟ, -ΤΟ. Pl. -ΜΕΘΑ, -ΣΘΕ, -ΝΤΟ.
3. λελυ -ΣΟ, -ΣΘΩ. Pl. -ΣΘΕ, -ΣΘΩΣΑΝ.

Such were the original forms of all the declensions ; the existing variations from them arise chiefly from σ being sometimes dropt in the second person singular and third person plural.

These analogies might easily be pursued further, and by the help of the irregular verbs even the active and passive systems might be traced to a common origin : but we must leave this enquiry to the curiosity of the student.

Of the Dual.

Rule 1. The first person, when there is one, is formed from the first plural by changing μεθα into μεθον, as λυομεθα, λυομεθον.

Rule 2. The second person is always formed from the second plural, by changing the final ε into ον, as λυετε, λυετον.

Rule 3. The third person is the same as the second as often as the third plural ends in σι or ται : otherwise it changes the final ον of the second into ην, as ελυετον, ελυετην ; but in the imperative into ων, as λυετον, λυετων.

Of the Tones.

In the active voice, the participles of the present, future, and aorist, and the infinitives of the aorist and parakeimen, are naturally paroxyton; and the participle of the parakeimen oxyton.

In the passive, the infinitive and participle of the parakeimen are paroxyton; the infinitive of the aorist passive properispômen, its subjunctive perispômen, and its participle oxyton.

The participle in τέος is paroxyton.

Of Contraction.

By contraction, verbs originally ending in αειν, εειν, and οειν, have received in the present and imperfect tenses a new form, which is also that in common use. Thus, for τιμαειν, to honor, we say τιμᾶν; for ποιεειν, to make, ποιεῖν; and for δηλοειν, to show, δηλοῦν.

The tenses thus contracted are declined as follows :

1. Infîn. Τιμᾶν.

	Ind. pres.	Imperf.	Opt.	Subj.	Imp.
S.	τιμ-ῶ	ε—ων	-ῶην	-ῶ
	-ᾶς	-ας	-ῶης	-ᾶς	-α
	-ᾷ	-α	-ῶη	-ᾷ	-άτω
P.	-ῶμεν	-ῶμεν	-ῶμεν	-ῶμεν
	-ᾶτε	-ᾶτε	-ῶητε	-ᾶτε	-ᾶτε
	-ῶσι	-ων	-ῶεν	-ῶσι	-ατωσαν or
Part.	τιμ-ῶν,	-ῶσα,	-ῶν.		[-ώντων.
G.	-ῶντος,	-ώσης,	-ῶντος.

Passive.Inf. τιμ-ᾶσθαι.

Ind. pres.	Imperf.	Opt.	Subj.	Imp.
S. τιμ-ῶμαι	ε—ώμην	-ώμην	-ῶμαι
-ᾶ	-ω	-ῶο	-ᾶ	-ω
-ᾶται	-ᾶτο	-ῶτο	-ᾶται	-ᾶσθω
P. -ωμεθα	-ωμεθα	-ώμεθα	-ωμεθα
-ᾶσθε	-ᾶσθε	-ῶσθε	-ᾶσθε	-ᾶσθε
-ώνται	-ώντο	-ῶντο	-ώνται	-ασθωσαν
Part. τιμ-ωμενος, -η, -ον.				[or -ασθων.

2. Inf. Ποι-εῖν.

S. ποι-ῶ	ε—ουν	-οίην	-ῶ
-εῖς	-εις	-οίης	-ῆς	-ει
-εῖ	-ει	-οίη	-ῆ	-ειτω
P. -οῦμεν	-οῦμεν	-οιημεν	-ῶμεν
-εῖτε	-εῖτε	-οιητε	-ῆτε	-εῖτε
-οῦσι	-ουν	-οῖεν	-ῶσι	-ειτωσαν
Part. ποι-ῶν, -οῦσα, -οῦν.				[or -ούντων.
G. -οῦντος, -ούσης, -οῦντος.

Passive.Inf. ποι-εῖσθαι.

S. ποι-οῦμαι	ε—οῦμην	-οίμην	-ῶμαι
-ῆ	-οῦ	-οῖο	-ῆ	-οῦ
-εῖται	-εῖτο	-οῖτο	-ῆται	-εῖσθω
P. -ουμεθα	-ουμεθα	-οιμεθα	-ωμεθα
-εῖσθε	-εῖσθε	-οῖσθε	-ῆσθε	-εῖσθε
-οῦνται	-οῦντο	-οῖντο	-ῶνται	-εισθωσαν
Part. ποι-ουμενος, -η, -ον.				[or -εῖσθων.

3. Inf. Δηλ-οὔν.

	Ind. pres.	Imperf.	Opt.	Subj.	Imp.
S.	δηλ-ῶ	ε—ουν	-οίην	-ῶ
	-οῖς	-ους	-οίης	-οῖς	-ου
	-οῖ	-ου	-οίη	-οῖ	-ούτω
P.	-οὔμεν	-οὔμεν	-οιημεν	-ῶμεν
	-οὔτε	-οὔτε	-οιητε	-ῶτε	-οὔτε
	-οὔσι	-ουν	-οῖεν	-ῶσι	-ουτωσαν or
Part.	δηλ-ῶν,	-οὔσα,	-οὔν.	[-ούντων.
G.	-οὔντος, -ούσης, -οὔντος.

Passive.

Inf. δηλ-οὔσθαι.

S.	δηλ-οὔμαι	ε—ούμην	-οίμην	-ῶμαι
	-οῖ	-οὔ	-οῖο	-οῖ	-οὔ
	-οὔται	-οὔτο	-οῖτο	-ῶται	-οὔσθω
P.	-ουμεθα	-ουμεθα	-οιμεθα	-ωμεθα
	-οὔσθε	-οὔσθε	-οῖσθε	-ῶσθε	-οὔσθε
	-οὔνται	-οὔντο	-οῖντο	-ῶνται	-ουσθωσαν
Part.	δηλ-ουμενος,	-η,	-ον.	[or -οὔσθων.

Note.—The contraction of the common optative in οῖμι also occurs, as τιμῶμι, ποιοῖμι, δηλοῖμι, but is less frequent than the form above.

Monosyllables in εῖν, as πλεῖν to make a voyage, δεῖν to need, rarely contract, except where ε would otherwise be doubled: thus we say πλεω, πλεῖς, πλεῖ; P. πλεομεν, πλείτε, πλεουσι, not πλῶ, πλούμεν, πλοῦσι.

Remarks on the Declension of the Regular Verb.

In each tense the student should notice first the formation of the base, then the formation of the moods and participle, and lastly the declension of these.

1. The base of the future is generally formed by adding σ to that of the present; as $\lambda\upsilon$ -ειν, $\lambda\upsilon\sigma$ -ειν.

If the base of the present terminates in a guttural or labial, then this σ forms with it a double letter, ξ with κ , γ , or χ ; ψ with π , β , or ϕ : as $\pi\lambda\epsilon\kappa$ -ειν, to weave, $\pi\lambda\epsilon\xi$ -ειν; $\tau\epsilon\rho\pi$ -ειν, to delight, $\tau\epsilon\rho\psi$ -ειν.

The dentals τ , δ , θ , and ζ are dropped before the σ ; as $\alpha\delta$ -ειν, to sing, $\alpha\sigma$ -ειν; $\phi\rho\alpha\zeta$ -ειν, to tell, $\phi\rho\alpha\sigma$ -ειν; $\tau\upsilon\pi\tau$ -ειν, to beat, $\tau\upsilon\psi$ -ειν: but $\sigma\sigma$ and $\tau\tau$ make ξ like the gutturals, as $\omicron\rho\upsilon\sigma\sigma$ -ειν or $\omicron\rho\upsilon\tau\tau$ -ειν, to dig, $\omicron\rho\upsilon\xi$ -ειν.

After the liquids λ , μ , ν , ρ , the σ is not inserted, the Greeks disliking that combination; an ϵ served in its place, and the preceding syllable was, if possible, shortened; and, lastly, the termination was contracted: as $\psi\alpha\lambda\lambda$ -ειν, to strike a chord ($\psi\alpha\lambda\epsilon$ -ειν), $\psi\alpha\lambda$ -εῖν; $\phi\alpha\iota\nu$ -ειν, to make appear, $\phi\alpha\nu$ -εῖν; $\sigma\pi\epsilon\iota\rho$ -ειν, to sow, $\sigma\pi\epsilon\rho$ -εῖν; $\tau\epsilon\mu\nu$ -ειν, to cut, $\tau\epsilon\mu$ -εῖν.

This form of the future is then declined throughout like the contracted present in εῖν; as, $\psi\alpha\lambda$ -εῖν, -ῶ, -οιην, -ῶν, and fut. mid. $\psi\alpha\lambda$ -εῖσθαι, -οῦμαι, -οιμην, -ουμενος.

Note.—After short vowels also the σ is often rejected and the termination contracted; as, $\epsilon\lambda\tilde{\alpha}\nu$ for $\epsilon\lambda\alpha\sigma\epsilon\iota\nu$, from $\epsilon\lambda\alpha\nu\nu\epsilon\iota\nu$, to drive; $\mu\alpha\chi\epsilon\acute{\iota}\sigma\theta\alpha\iota$ for $\mu\alpha\chi\epsilon\sigma\epsilon\sigma\theta\alpha\iota$, from $\mu\alpha\chi\epsilon\sigma\theta\alpha\iota$, to fight; $\beta\alpha\delta\iota\epsilon\acute{\iota}\nu$ for $\beta\alpha\delta\iota\sigma\epsilon\iota\nu$, from $\beta\alpha\delta\iota\zeta\epsilon\iota\nu$, to walk.

Verbs in $\tilde{\alpha}\nu$ and $\epsilon\acute{\iota}\nu$ commonly make the future in $\eta\sigma\epsilon\iota\nu$, and those in $\omicron\upsilon\nu$ in $\omega\sigma\epsilon\iota\nu$: as $\tau\iota\mu$ - $\tilde{\alpha}\nu$, $\tau\iota\mu$ - $\eta\sigma\epsilon\iota\nu$; $\pi\omicron\iota$ - $\epsilon\acute{\iota}\nu$, $\pi\omicron\iota$ - $\eta\sigma\epsilon\iota\nu$; $\delta\eta\lambda$ - $\omicron\upsilon\nu$, $\delta\eta\lambda$ - $\omega\sigma\epsilon\iota\nu$.

Note.—It is supposed that the original termination of the future was $-\epsilon\sigma\epsilon\iota\nu$, which by sometimes dropping the ϵ , sometimes the σ , and at others combining with adjoining vowels, gave occasion to the above varieties of formation.

2. The base of the aorist is in general the same with that of the future: but a short vowel followed by a liquid is lengthened, as $\psiαλ-εῖν$, $\psiῆλ-αι$; $σπερ-εῖν$, $σπεῖρ-αι$; and if σ has been rejected in the future after a short vowel, it is resumed, as $ελᾶν$, $ελάσαι$; $βαδιεῖν$, $βαδίσαι$.

Of the Irregular Aorist.

The aorist has in many verbs a form altogether distinct from that given above; and commonly, though improperly, called the second aorist.

In its terminations it in general resembles the present, but in the indicative the imperfect: its infinitive moreover is perispômen, and its participle oxyton. For example, from $λαμβάνειν$, to take, we have

	Inf.	Ind.	Opt.	Subj.	Imp.	Part.
Aor.	$λαβ-εῖν$,	$ε-ον$,	$-οιμι$,	$-ω$,	$-ε$,	$-ὼν$.
Aor. mid.	$λαβ-έσθαι$,	$ε-ομην$,	$-οιμην$,	$-ωμαι$,	$-οῦ$,	$-όμενος$.

Its base is generally that of the present in some way shortened, and may commonly be regarded as exhibiting the most original and radical form of the verb.

Note.—Both forms of the aorist are occasionally met with in the same verb, seldom, however in writers of the same class, the irregular aorist being commonly confined in such cases to the poets, or older authors, or to those of another dialect. Both forms had in general precisely the same signification, but in a few instances the irregular was retained in a neuter sense, while the regular was taken for the active : as from ληθειν or λανθανειν, to be hid, aor. λαθεῖν, to be hid ; but the compound επιλησαι, to make forgetful. Again, from ιστάναι, to set, aor. neut. στήναι, to stand, aor. act. στήσαι, to set.

3. The base of the parakeimen active may in general be derived from that of the future by making a certain addition or augment at the beginning, and either substituting κ for σ at the end, as in λυσ-ειν, λελυκ-εναι ; φιλησ-ειν, πεφιληκ-έναι ; or adding it to the base of futures in εῖν, as ψαλ-εῖν, εψαλκ-έναι ; αρ-εῖν, ηρκ-έναι ; or by substituting φ for ψ, and χ for ξ, as in ριψ-ειν, ερριφ-έναι ; πραξ-ειν, πεπραχ-έναι.

With respect to the addition at the beginning, we may observe from the foregoing examples, 1st, That when a verb begins with a consonant that consonant is repeated, ε being interposed ; excepting that ρ is doubled in its place and ε prefixed ; that the slender is used for the aspirate, as in πεφιληκέναι ; and that in verbs beginning with a double letter, or σ followed by another consonant, nothing is done but prefixing ε : 2d, That when the verb begins with a short vowel such vowel is changed for a long one.

The rule of this change is as follows :

α	..is changed into ..	η
αι	η
αυ	ηυ
ε	η OR ει
ο	ω
οι	ω

The other diphthongs are not altered, except that ευ is sometimes changed into ην.

Such is the regular formation of this tense; but as anomalies we may observe that ε of the future is sometimes changed into α or ο, as στελείν, to be about to send, εσταλκέναι; πεμψειν, to be about to send, πεπομφέναι: that ν is often dropped, as κτενείν, to be about to kill, εκτακέναι; κρινείν, to be about to judge, κεκρικέναι: and that futures in μείν have their parakeimen in μηκέναι, as νεμείν, to be about to allot, νενεμηκέναι; τεμείν, to be about to cut, τετμηκέναι.

In verbs beginning with a vowel it was not unusual not merely to lengthen that vowel but to prefix ε at the same time, as οίξειν, to be about to open, εωγέναι; or even to repeat the whole of the first syllable, as ολεσειν, to be about to destroy, ολωλεκέναι.

Many parakeimens, especially such as bear a neuter sense, deviate from the rule in omitting κ or the aspiration, as ακηκοέναι from ακουειν, to hear; λελοιπέναι from λειπειν, to leave; σεσηπέναι from σηπειν, to rot. Forms of this kind are in many instances confined to the poets, being replaced in the best prose writers by others more regular.

In a few instances they were retained in use in a neuter sense, while a more regular form was at the same time employed in an active sense; as πεποιθέναι, to trust, and πεπεικέναι, to have persuaded, from πειθειν; πεπραγέναι, to have made (for oneself), and πεπραχέναι, to have acted (towards ano- ther), from πρασσειν; ολωλέναι, to have perished, and ολωλέκέναι, to have destroyed, from ολλύναι; πεφηνέναι, to appear, and πεφαγκέναι, to have shown or made appear, from φαίνειν. In cases of this kind the first of these forms may with propriety be called the parakeimen neuter or middle.

Note.—The parakeimen active has sometimes an irregular form as it were by syncope: thus we read τεθνηκέναι or τεθνάναι, to be dead, τεθνηκαμεν, -ατε, -ασι, or τεθναμεν, -ατε, -ασι; τεθνηκοιμι or τεθναιην; and with this form there goes an imperative τεθναθι: part. τεθνηκῶς or τεθνεῶς.

In like manner for έστηκέναι, to stand, &c. we often read έστάναι, έσταμεν, -ατε, -ασι; opt. έσταιην; subj. έστώ; imp. έσταθι; part. έστῶς, -ῶσα, -ὸς. In the hypersynt. έστασαν for είστηκεσαν.

4. The base of the parakeimen passive is, in general, the same as that of the active, except when the latter has a final κ. In this case the κ is either dropped, as in λελυκ-έναι, λελύ-σθαι; or in case of the base of the present ending in a dental, replaced by σ, as πεπεικ-έναι, πεπεῖσ-θαι from πειθειν.

In adapting the several terminations of this tense to the base, we do not find that absolute uniformity which prevails in other tenses.

To a base ending in a consonant the infinitive adds only θαι, but to one ending in a vowel it adds σθαι.

The manner in which a final consonant in the base is accommodated to the several terminations will appear from the following examples:

1. Γεγράφ-θαι, to be written.

Indic. γεγρα-μμαι, -ψαι, -πται, -μμεθα, -φθε.

2. Πεπράχ-θαι, to be done.

Indic. πεπρα-γμαι, -ξαι, -κται, -γμεθα, -χθε.

3. Πεπείσ-θαι, to be persuaded.

Indic. πεπει-σμαι, -σαι, -ται, -σμεθα, -σθε.

4. Πεφάν-θαι, to be made appear.

Indic. πεφα-σμαι, -νσαι, -νται, -σμεθα, -νθε.

In such verbs, seeing that the third person plural cannot well be formed, a periphrasis with the participle is used instead of it, as γεγραμμένοι εισι; and the same thing is done in the optative and subjunctive moods, as γεγραμμένος ειην, γεγραμμένος ὦ. If, however, the infinitive end in ἦσθαι or ὠσθαι, these moods admit of being regularly formed, as πεφιλ-ημην, -ῆο, -ῆτο; πεφιλ-ῶμαι, -ῆ, -ῆται; δε-δηλ-ῶμην, -ῶο, ῶτο, &c.; but even here the periphrasis is more in use.

Note.—In the Ionic, and sometimes in Attic writers, a third person plural was formed by substituting α for ν; as τεταχатаι for τεταχνται, that is τεταγμένοι εισι, they are arranged (Thuc.); τετραφатаι for τετραφνται or τετραμμένοι εισι, they are turned (Plat.). The same occurred in other tenses, as πυθοιατο for πυθoinτο, they might be informed.

5. The base of the future met' oligon is almost invariably formed by adding σ to that of the parakeimen passive, with the same necessary accommodation of the letters to each other as takes place in the second person singular of that tense: as λελυ-σθαι, λελυσ-εσθαι; γεγραφ-θαι, γεγραψ-εσθαι; πεπραχ-θαι, πεπραξ-εσθαι; πεπεισ-θαι, πεπεισ-εσθαι. The use of this tense is, however, somewhat unfrequent.

6. The base of the aorist passive is formed from that of the parakeimen by rejecting the augment at the beginning and adding θ at the end; as λελυ-σθαι, λυθ-ῆναι; ἦρ-θαι, to be taken away, αρθ-ῆναι.

This θ however, after mutes and liquids, is not unfrequently omitted: as in φανῆναι, to have appeared; τραφῆναι, to have been nourished; κοπῆναι, to have been chopped; βλαβῆναι, to have been hurt; αλλαγῆναι, to have been changed; and many others.

There are also a good many verbs in which both forms were occasionally used: as τραπῆναι and τρεφθῆναι, to have been turned; ταγῆναι and ταχθῆναι, to have been ordered; αγγελῆναι and ἀγγελθῆναι, to have been told.

7. The base of the future passive invariably adds ης to that of the aorist, as λυθ-ῆναι, λυθησ-εσθαι.

Note.—The infinitive terminations ειν and ῆναι were formed by contraction from εμεναι and ημεναι, which with intermediate forms in εμεν and ημεν are frequent in the older authors; as ελθεμεναι and ελθέμεν for ελθεῖν, to come; μιγήμεναι for μιγῆναι, to have been mixed.

The second person singular in η, both in the indicative and subjunctive, ended originally in σαι, as λυσαι, λυησαι; whence, by omitting σ, λυει, λυηαι, forms still read in the poets: hence again by contraction λυη with the iōta underwritten. In like manner the second person in ου ended in εσο, and that in ω in ασο; as λυεσο, λυεω, λυου; ελυσασο, ελυσω; and the third person plural of the imperfect in ου ended in οσαν, as ελυοσαν, ελυον.

For μεθα in the first person plural the poets often use μεσθα, as λυομεσθα for λυομεθα.

The poets often used an imperfect in σκον, as παυεσκον, I stopped, for επανον.

In the optative mood of the parakeimen, irregular aorist, and future perispōmen, the form in οιην is often used instead of that in οιμι; as πεφευγοιην, I might have escaped; ελη- λυθοιην, I might be come; σχοιην, I might have got; εύροιην, I might have found; φανοιην, I should make appear.

The plural optatives in ημεν, ητε, ησαν, were always liable to be contracted; as λυθ-εῖμεν, -εῖτε, -εῖεν, for λυθει-ημεν, -ητε, -ησαν; and ποιοῖμεν, -οῖτε, for ποιοι-ημεν, -ητε.

The old poetic form of the subjunctive made λυωμι for λυω, and in the 3d sing. λυησι for λυη.

The third persons in ε and ι take the addition of ν, called in this case paragogic, when the following word begins with a vowel; as εστιν ανθρωπος, there is a man.

Of the Augment of the Past Tenses.

The tenses of past time, namely, the imperfect, aorist, and hypersyntelick, receive in the indicative mood a certain increase at the beginning, which is called the augment. It consists in prefixing ε, if the verb begin with a consonant, and in other cases in changing a short vowel into a long one, in the manner already stated with reference to the augment of the parakeimen: as ελυον, ελυσα, ελελυκειν; and in the passive ελυομην, ελυσαμην, ελελυμην, ελυθην: also ηνδανον, I was pleasing, from ανδανειν; ηρον, I was taking up, from αιρειν; ωκουν, I was dwelling, from οικεῖν.

Sometimes both these augments take place together, as έωρων, I was seeing, from όρᾶν.

In verbs compounded with prepositions the augment generally takes place between the preposition and the verb, as in περιεβαλον, I threw around, from περιβαλλειν: but in some instances, in which the original verb has become nearly obsolete, the augment is prefixed to the preposition, as in εκαθευδον, I was sleeping; ηπισταμην, I understood.

In poetry nothing is more common than the omission of the augment of the past tenses altogether, and in the hypersyntelick this is not unfrequent even in prose.

Of the Participle in τεος.

This participle is chiefly used in the neuter gender, and with the force of an active or neuter impersonal verb: as λυτέον ἐστὶ, it is necessary to loose; νικητέα ἐστὶ, one must conquer. It is most commonly formed by adding τεος to the base of the parakeimen passive, rejecting the initial augment.

Note.—This participle admits a passive sense also; as ὠφελητέα σοι ἡ πόλις ἐστὶ (Xen.) the city ought to be benefitted by you: where ὠφελητέα is the feminine singular.

OF VERBS OF IRREGULAR DECLENSION.

The principal of these are certain verbs whose infinitive present ends in ναι instead of εἶν. The irregularity in their mode of declension is only partial, affecting more or less the present and imperfect tenses and sometimes the aorist. For the rest they are declined like verbs regular.

Note.—The declension of these verbs as exhibited below is agreeable to the prevailing usage of the best authors, but the student should be aware that many variations will be met with in reading.

These verbs have their infinitives in ἀναι, ἐναι, οναι, and ὕναι, which represent respectively regular forms in ἄν, εἶν, οὖν, and υεῖν, which forms supply them with their regular tenses, and sometimes even with parts of those which are irregular.

1. Inf. ἵσταναι, to set.

	Ind. pres.	Imperf.	Opt.	Subj.	Imp.
S.	ἵσταν-ημι	-ην	-αιην	-ῶ
	-ης	-ης	-αιης	-ῆς	-αθι or -η
	-ησι	-η	-αιη	-ῇ	-ατω
	-ᾶμεν	-ᾶμεν	-αιημεν	-ῶμεν
P.	-ᾶτε	-ᾶτε	-αιητε	-ῆτε	-ατε
	-ᾶσι	-ᾶσαν	-αῖεν	-ῶσι	-ατωσαν
Part.	ἵσταν-ας,	-ᾶσα,	-αν.	[or -αντων.
G.	-άντος, -άσης, -άντος.

Aorist Neuter. Inf. στανῆναι, to have stood.

	Ind.	Opt.	Subj.	Imp.
S.	εστ-ην	στ-αιην	στ-ῶ
	-ης	-αιης	-ῆς	στ-ῆθι
	-η	-αιη	-ῇ	-ητω
P.	-ημεν	-αιημεν	-ῶμεν
	-ητε	-αιητε	-ῆτε	-ητε
	-ησαν	-αῖεν	-ῶσι	-ητωσαν or
Part.	στ-as,	-ᾶσα,	-αν.	[-ητων.
G.	-αντος, -ασης, -αντος.

Note.—Στα for στανῆθι occurs in compounds, as αναστα for αναστανῆθι, rise up.

Passive.

Inf. ἵστανσθαι.

	Ind.	Imperf.	Opt.	Subj.	Imp.
S.	ἵσταν-ᾶμαι	-αμην	-αιμην	-ῶμαι
	-ᾶσαι	{ -ασο or -ω }	-αιο	-ῇ	{ -ασο or -ω }
	-ᾶται	-ατο	-αιτο	-ῆται	-ασθω

P. ἰστ-αμεθα -αμεθα -αιμεθα -ωμεθα
 -ασθε -ασθε -αασθε -ῆσθε -ασθε
 -ανται -αντο -αιντο -ῶνται -ασθωσαν Part. ἰσταμενος, -η, -ον. [or -ασθων.

2. Inf. Τιθ-έναι, to put or place.

	Ind.	Imperf.	Opt.	Subj.	Imp.
S.	τιθ-ημι	ε—ουν	-ειην	-ῶ
	-ης	-εις	-ειης	-ῆς	-ετι οτ -ει
	-ησι	-ει	-ειη	-ῇ	-ετω
P.	-εμεν	-εμεν	-ειημεν	-ῶμεν
	-ετε	-ετε	-ειητε	-ῆτε	-ετε
	-εᾶσι	{ -εσαν or -ουν }	-εἶεν	-ῶσι	{ -ετωσαν or -εντων.

Part. τιθ-εις, -εἶσα, -έν.
G. -έντος, -είσης, -έντος.

Aorist. Inf. θ-εῖναι.

	Ind.	Opt.	Subj.	Imp.
S.	εθ-ηκα	θ-ειην	θ-ῶ
	-ηκας	-ειης	-ῆς	θ-ες
	-ηκε	-ειη	-ῇ	-ετω
P.	-εμεν	-ειημεν	-ῶμεν
	-ετε	-ειητε	-ῆτε	-ετε
	{ -έσαν or -ηκαν }	-εἶεν	-ῶσι	{ -ετωσαν or -εντων.

Part. θ-εις, -εἶσα, -εν.
G. -εντος, -εισης, -εντος.

Passive.

Inf. τιθ-εσθαι.

	Ind. pres.	Imperf.	Opt.	Subj.	Imp.
S.	τιθ-εμαι	ε—εμην	-ειμην	-ῶμαι
	-εσαι	{ -εσο or -ου }	-εἶο	-ῆ	-έσο or -ου
	-εται	-ετο	-εἶτο	-ῆται	-εσθω
P.	-εμεθα	-εμεθα	-ειμεθα	-ωμεθα
	-εσθε	-εσθε	-εἶσθε	-ῆσθε	-εσθε
	-ενται	-εντο	-εἶντο	-ῶνται	-εσθωσαν
Part.	τιθεμενος, -η, -ον.				[or -εσθων.

Aorist Middle. Inf. θ-εσθαι.

	Ind.	Opt.	Subj.	Imp.
S.	εθ-εμην	θ-ειμην	θ-ῶμαι
	-εσο or -ου }	-εἶο	-ῆ	θ-οῦ
	-ετο	-εἶτο	-ῆται	-εσθω
P.	-εμεθα	-ειμεθα	-ωμεθα
	-εσθε	-εἶσθε	-ῆσθε	-εσθε
	-εντο	-εἶντο	-ῶνται	-εσθωσαν or
Part.	θεμενος, -η, -ον.			[-εσθων.

Note.—In the optative τιθαιμην and θαιμην are quite as much used by Attic writers as τιθειμην and θειμην.

3. Inf. Διδ-άουαι, to give.

	Ind.	Imperf.	Opt.	Subj.	Imp.
S.	διδ-ωμι	ε—ουν	-οιην	-ῶ
	-ως	-ουε	-οιης	-ῶς	-αθι or -ου
	-ωσι	-ου	-οιη	-ῶ	-οτω

P. διδ-ομεν	-ομεν	-οιημεν	-ῶμεν
-οτε	-οτε	-οιητε	-ῶτε	-οτε
-οᾶσι	{ -οσαν or -ουν }		-οῖεν	-ῶσι { -οτωσαν or -οντων.

Part. διδ-οὺς, -οὔσα, -ὸν.

G. -όντος, -ούσης, -όντος.

Aorist. Inf. δ-οῦναι.

	Ind.	Opt.	Subj.	Imp.
S. ἐδ-ωκα	δ-οιην	δ-ῶ
-ωκας	-οιης	-ῶς	δ-οῖ
-ωκε	-οιη	-ῶ	-οτω
P. -ομεν	-οιημεν	-ῶμεν
-οτε	-οιητε	-ῶτε	-οτε
-οσαν or -ωκαν	{ -οῖεν -οῖεν }		-ῶσι	{ -οτωσαν or -οντων.

Part. δ-ους, -οὔσα, -ον.

G. -οντος, -ουσης, -οντος.

Passive.

Inf. διδ-οσθαι.

	Ind.	Imperf.	Opt.	Subj.	Imp.
S. διδ-ομαι	ε—ομην	-οιμην	-ῶμαι
-οσαι	{ -οσο or -ου }		-οῖο	-ῶ	-οσο or -ου
-οται	-οτο	-οῖτο	-ῶται	-οσθω
P. -ομεθα	-ομεθα	-οιμεθα	-ῶμεθα
-οσθε	-οσθε	-οισθε	-ῶσθε	-οσθε
-ονται	-οντο	-οῖντο	-ῶνται	-οσθωσαν

Part. διδομενος, -η, -ον.

[or -οσθων.

Aorist Middle. Inf. δ-οσθαι.

	Ind.	Opt.	Subj.	Imp.
S.	εδ-ομην	δ-οιμην	δ-ῶμαι
	-οσο or -ου	-οῖο	-ῶ	δ-οῦ
	-οτο	-οῖτο	-ῶται	-οσθω
P.	-ομεθα	-οιμεθα	-ωμεθα
	-οσθε	-οισθε	-ῶσθε	-οσθε
	-οντο	-οῖντο	-ῶνται	-οσθωσαν or
Part.	δομενος, -ης, -ον.			[οσθων.

Note.—In the imperfect active of the two last verbs there are also such forms as ετιθην, εδιδων, and in the aorist εθην, εδων, but these are scarcely used.

4. Inf. Δεικν-ύναι, to show.

	Ind.	Imperf.	Imp.
S.	δεικν-ῦμι	ε—υν
	-ῦς	-υς	-ῦθι or -υ
	-ῦσι	-υ	-ῦτω
P.	-ῦμεν	-ῦμεν
	-ῦτε	-ῦτε	-ῦτε
	-υᾶσι	-ῦσαν	-υτωσαν or -υντων.
Part.	δεικν-ὺς, -ῦσα, -ὺν.
G.	-ύντος, -ύσης, -ύντος.

Passive.

Inf. δεικν-υσθαι.

	Ind.	Imperf.	Imp.
S.	δεικν-ῦμαι	ε—ῦμην
	-ῦσαι	-ῦσο	-ῦσο
	-ῦται	-ῦτο	-υσθω

P. δεικν-υμεθα -υμεθα
 -υσθε -υσθε -υσθε
 -υνται -υντο -υσθωσαν or -υσθων.

Part. δεικνυμενος, -η, -ον.

Note.—The regular form in υειν often supersedes this form, and always supplies the optative and subjunctive.

Many other irregular verbs conform more or less to these models, a few of which must here be noticed.

1. Ίέναι, to send; like τιθέναι.

Pres. indic. ί-ημι, -ης, -ησι; -εμεν, ετε, -ασι.
 imperf. ί-ουν, -εις, -ει; -εμεν, -ετε, -εσαν; opt. ίειην; subj. ίω; inf. ίεθι or ίει; part. ίείς.

Aor., inf. είναι; ind. ήκα, ήκας, ήκε; είμεν, είτε, είσαν or ήκαν; opt. είην; subj. ω; imp. ές; part. είς.

Passive pres. ίεσθαι; ind. ίεμαι; imperf. ίεμην; opt. ίειμην or ίοιμην; subj. ίωμαι; imp. ίεσο; part. ίεμενος.

Aorist middle, inf. έσθαι; ind. είμην, -σο, -το; -μεθα, -σθε, -ντο; opt. είμην or οίμην; subj. ωμαι; imp. δυ; part. έμενος.

2. Ίέναι, to go.

Pres. είμι, I am going, εί, εισι; ιμεν, ιτε, ιασι.
 imperf. ηειν, I went, ηεις, ηει; ηειμεν, ηειτε, ηεσαν;
 opt. ιοιμι or ιοιην; subj. ιω; imp. ιθι, ιτω; part. ιών.

3. Φαναι, to have said, is an aorist to which φασκειν serves as a present.

Indic. εφ-ην, I said, -ης, -η; -αμεν, -ατε, -ασαν;
 opt. φαιην; subj. φω; imp. φαθι; part. φας.

Pres. ind. φημι, φης, φησι; φαμεν, φατε, φασι.

Aorist middle, inf. φασθαι; ind. εφάμην; part. φάμενος.

4. Δυνασθαι, to be able, has only the passive form.

Ind. δυνα-μαι, -σαι, -ται; -μεθα, -σθε, -νται; imperf. εδυναμην; opt. δυναιμην; subj. δυνωμαι; imp. δυνασο; part. δυναμενος.

In like manner is declined επιστασθαι, to understand.

Some verbs have the aorist according to this analogy, whose present is regular; as βαίνειν, to go; aor. βῆναι, declined like στήναι; δυεσθαι, to go under; aor. δύναι; ind. εδυν; part. δυσ.

So also γινγνωσκειν, to know: aor. γνῶναι; ind. εγν-ων, -ως, -ω; -ωμεν, -ωτε, -ωσαν; opt. γνοιην; subj. γνῶ; imp. γνῶθι; part. γνους.

The present of certain verbs much resembles a parakeimen passive: such are κείσθαι, to lie; and ἥσθαι, to sit.

Κείσθαι, to lie; ind. κεί-μαι, -σαι, -ται; -μεθα, -σθε, -νται; imp. εκειμην; opt. κειοιμην; subj. κεω-μαι; imperat. κείσο; part. κειμενος.

OF DEFECTIVE VERBS.

Not all verbs are declined through all the tenses, moods, and persons. This arises either from defect in the formation of the verb itself, in which case what is wanting is commonly supplied from other roots; or from the sense of the verb being such as not to call all its parts into use.

Verbs defective in formation are for the most part irregular also, and therefore need not now be further considered. Those defective from the nature of their signification are chiefly either such as are used only in the present and imperfect tenses, or such as from being used only in one person are called impersonal.

The former sort are chiefly such as follow : κελαινιᾶν, to be blackish ; γαληνιᾶν, to be calm ; γαμη-σειειν, to wish to marry ; πολεμησησειειν, to wish for war ; and others of like form signifying states and desires.

Impersonal verbs express something respecting the state of things in general, without indicating any particular subject : such is δεῖν, to be necessary ;
ind. δεῖ ; imperf. εδει ; opt. δαιοιη ; subj. δεη ; part.
δουν ; fut. δεησει ; aor. εδεησε.

Personal verbs are often used impersonally : as δοκεῖ, it appears ; εοικεν, it is fit ; γεγονεν, it is done.

Note.—In verbs in which the present active is taken only in a neuter or middle sense, the future and aorist active are frequently not in use, their place being supplied by the middle tenses : an aorist active of the irregular form is, however, often retained in such cases ; as λαμβάνειν, to take ;
f. ληψέσθαι ; a. λαβεῖν ; p. ειληφέναι. In like manner, when the present passive is confined to a neuter or middle sense, the future and aorist passive will seldom be met with ; as in αισθάνεσθαι ; a. m. αισθέσθαι ; p. ησθῆσθαι. Moreover in the former of these cases all the proper passive tenses are often entirely wanting, as are the active in the latter ; as in τρέχειν, to run ; δεχέσθαι, to take.

Many more examples illustrative of these remarks will be found in the following table.

A Synopsis of the most remarkable Irregular and Defective Verbs, together with their principal Tenses.

Note.—It will be manifest from the following table, that the irregularities of Greek Verbs arise for the most part in one of the three following ways. Either the present is in some way lengthened out, as in ἀλίσκεσθαι, ἁμαρτανεῖν, ἀρρισκεῖν, πιπρασκειν: or the forms attending the infinitive in ναι are assumed by one or more tenses: or, lastly, the tenses composing in effect one verb are made up from different roots.

Αγασθαι, to admire; f. m. αγασεσθαι, a. m. αγασασθαι, a. p. αγασθῆναι.

αγειν, to lead; f. αξειν, a. αγαγεῖν, p. ηχέναι and αγηοχέναι, p. p. ἦχθαι.

αγνύναι or αγνύειν, to break; f. αξειν, a. ind. εαξα, p. εαγέναι, to be broken, p. p. εάχθαι, a. p. ind. εαγην.

αίρεῖν, to take; f. αῖρησειν, a. ἐλείν, ind. εἶλον, p. p. ἥρῃσθαι, a. p. αῖρεθῆναι.

αισθανεσθαι, to perceive; f. m. αισθησεσθαι, a. m. αισθεσθαι, p. ησθῆσθαι.

αλεξειν, to ward off; f. αλεξησειν: more used in the middle, αλεξεσθαι, f. αλεξησεσθαι.

ἀλίσκεσθαι, to be caught or taken; f. m. ἄλωσεσθαι, a. ἄλῶναι, ind. ἐάλων, p. ἐάλωκέναι, to be taken.

ἁμαρτανεῖν, to err; f. m. ἁμαρτησεσθαι, a. ἁμαρτεῖν, p. ἥμαρτηκέναι.

αμβλiskein, to bring forth an abortion; f. αμβλωσειν, p. ημβλωκέναι.

αμφιεννύναι (from the poetic εννύναι), to put on;

- f. αμφιεσιν, a. αμφιέσαι, f. m. αμφιεσεσθαι, a. m. αμφιεσασθαι, p. p. ημφιέσθαι.
- αναλίσκειν, to consume; f. αναλώσειν, a. αναλώσαι, p. ανηλωκέναι, p. p. ανηλώσθαι.
- ἀνδανειν, to please; f. ἀδήσειν, a. ἀδεῖν, ind. εαδον, p. ἐαδέναι.
- ανοιγειν (from ριγειν or οιγνύναι, which are little used), to open; f. ανοιξειν, a. ανοίξαι, ind. ανεφξα, p. ανεωγέναι, to be open, p. p. ανεῶχθαι, a. p. ανοιχθῆναι.
- ανωγειν, to order (poetic); f. ανωξειν, a. ανῶξαι, p. ανωγέναι, p. imperat. ανωχθι.
- απεχθανεσθαι, to displease; f. m. απεχθησεσθαι, a. m. απεχθέσθαι, p. απηχθῆσθαι.
- αραρισκειν, to fit or adapt (poetic); a. αρσαι, p. αραρέναι or αρηρέναι.
- αρεσκειν, to please; a. αρέσαι, f. m. αρεσεσθαι, a. m. αρεσασθαι, a. p. αρεσθῆναι.
- αυξειν and αυξανειν (poet. αεξειν), to increase; f. αυξησειν, a. αυξῆσαι, p. p. ηυξηῆσθαι.
- Βαινειν, to go; f. βησειν (in an active sense), a. neut. βῆναι, p. βεβηκέναι or βεβάναι, part. βεβηκὼς and βεβὼς, f. m. βησεσθαι, p. p. βεβασθαι, a. p. βαθῆναι.
- βαλλειν, to throw; f. βαλεῖν, a. βαλεῖν, p. βεβληκέναι, p. p. βεβλήσθαι, for which Homer uses βλήσθαι.
- βιοῦν, to live; f. m. βιωσεσθαι, a. βιώσαι and likewise βιῶναι, p. βεβιωκέναι. Ζῆν is more used in the present.
- βλαστανειν, to bud; f. βλαστησειν, a. βλαστεῖν.

βοσκειν, to feed; f. βοσκησειν.

βουλεσθαι, to be willing; ind. pres. 2d pers. βουλει, f. m. βουλησεσθαι, p. βεβουλῆσθαι (poet. βεβουλέναι), a. p. βουληθῆναι.

Γαμεῖν, to marry; f. γαμεσειν or rather γαμεῖν, a. γῆμαι, sometimes γαμῆσαι, p. γεγαμηκέναι, pass. γαμεῖσθαι is said of the woman, a. m. γημασθαι.

γηρασκειν or γηρᾶν, to grow old; f. γηρασειν, a. γηρᾶσαι.

γιγνωσκειν, to notice or know; f. m. γνωσεσθαι, a. γνῶναι, p. εγνωκέναι or ειδέναι, p. p. εγνωσθαι.

For the sense of to know one chiefly uses ειδέναι, which is thus declined:—inf. ειδέναι; ind. οἶδα, οἶσθα, οἶδε; pl. ισμεν, ιστε, ισασι (οιδ-αμεν, -ατε, -ασι, rarely); opt. ειδειην; subj. ειδῶ; imp. ισθι, ιστω; part. ειδὼς; hypers. ηδειν; f. metol. εισεσθαι.

γιγνεσθαι, to be produced; f. m. γενησεσθαι, a. m. γενέσθαι, p. neut. γεγονέναι, part. γεγονὼς or γεγὼς, p. p. γεγενῆσθαι, a. m. in an active sense γεινασθαι.

Δαῆναι, aor. to have learnt (poetic); f. δαησεσθαι, p. δεδαηκέναι.

δακνειν, to bite; f. m. δηξεσθαι, a. δακεῖν, p. p. δεδῆχθαι.

δαρθανειν, to sleep; f. m. δαρθησεσθαι, a. δαρθεῖν.

δειδειν, to fear; f. δεισειν, p. δεδοικέναι and δεδιέναι, ind. δεδια, pl. δεδιμεν, δεδιτε; δεδιασι, imper. δεδιθι.

δεικνύναι, to show; f. δειξειν.

διδόναι, to give; f. δωσειν, a. δοῦναι, p. δεδωκέναι, p. p. δεδόσθαι, a. p. δοθῆναι.

διδρασκειν (used chiefly in composition, as αποδιδρασκειν, to steal away or flee); f. m. δρασσεσθαι, a. δρᾶναι, ind. εδραν, p. δεδρακέναι.

δοκεῖν, to seem or think; f. δοξειν, a. δοξαι, p. p. δεδόχθαι.

δυειν, to cause to go under; δυεσθαι and δυνειν, to go under; a. δῦναι, p. δεδυκέναι.

δυνασθαι, to be able; f. m. δυνησεσθαι, p. δεδυνῆσθαι, a. p. δυνηθῆναι and δυνασθῆναι.

ἔζεσθαι, to sit; f. m. ἐδεῖσθαι, a. act. εἶσαι, to seat or place; whence a f. m. transitive εἴσεσθαι, and a. m. εἷσασθαι or ἔσσασθαι, p. εἶσθαι; whence ἦσθαι, to sit, ind. ἦμαι, part. ἥμενος.

εθιζειν, to accustom; f. εθισειν, p. ειωθέναι, to be accustomed, p. p. ειθίσθαι.

εικειν, to yield to; f. ειξειν, a. εἶξαι, p. εοικέναι, to be like or fitting.

ειλειν or ειλλειν, to press or roll together; a. εἰλαῖ, a. p. αληῆναι, ind. εαλην. This is a poetical word allied to the common form ειλείν, to roll.

εννύναι, to put on (poetic); p. p. εἶσθαι, part. εἰμένος. See αμφιεννύναι.

ελαυνειν, to drive; f. ελασειν, and by syncope ελᾶν, a. ελάσαι, p. εληλακέναι, part. p. p. εληλαμένος, a. p. ελαθῆναι and ελασθῆναι.

ἐπειν, to attend or direct (in prose only in composition); imperf. εἶπον, f. ἐψειν, a. σπεῖν. Hence ἐπεσθαι to follow; f. ἐψεσθαι, a. σπέσθαι.

ἐπιστάσθαι, to understand; imp. ἠπισταμην, f. ἐπιστήσεσθαι, a. ἐπιστηθῆναι.

ερευνεῖν and ἐρυθαινεῖν, to redder; f. ἐρυθησεῖν.

ἐρχεσθαι, to come; f. ἐλευσεσθαι, a. ἐλθεῖν, p. ἐληλυθέναι.

ἐσθιεῖν, to eat; f. m. ἐδεσθαι or φαγεσθαι, a. φαγεῖν, p. ἐδηδοκέναι or βεβρωκέναι (from βιβρωσκεῖν, little used), p. p. ἐδηδέσθαι or βεβρώσθαι, a. p. ἐδεσθῆναι or βρωθῆναι.

εὔρισκεῖν, to find; f. εὔρησεῖν, a. εὔρεῖν, p. εὔρηκέναι, p. p. εὔρησθαι, a. p. εὔρεθῆναι.

εχειν, to have; f. ἔξειν, f. m. ἔξεσθαι, imperf. εἶχον. See ἰσχειν, some of whose tenses it borrows.

Ζευγνύναι, to yoke or join together; f. ζευξεῖν, a. ζεῦξαι, p. p. ἐζεῦχθαι, a. p. ζυγῆναι.

ζῆν, to live; ind. ζῶ, ζῆς, ζῇ; imp. ἐζ-ην or ἐζ-ων, -ης, -η; imperat. ζῆθι, f. ζησεῖν, f. m. ζησεσθαι.

ζωννύναι, to gird; f. ζωσειν, a. ζῶσαι, part. p. p. ἐζωσμένος.

Θαμβεῖν, to astonish or be astonished; f. θαμβησεῖν, a. θαμβῆσαι. Also, a. neut. ταφεῖν, and p. neut. τεθηπέναι, which are poetic.

θαπτεῖν, to bury; f. θαψεῖν, a. θαψαι, a. p. ταφῆναι.

θιγγανεῖν, to touch; f. θιξειν, a. θιγεῖν.

θνησκεῖν, to die; f. m. θανείσθαι, a. θανεῖν, p. τεθνηκέναι or τεθνάναι.

θρωσκεῖν, to leap; f. m. θορεῖσθαι, a. θορεῖν.

ἰέναι, to send; f. ἦσειν, a. εἶναι, p. εἰκέναι, f. m. ἦσεσθαι, a. m. ἔσθαι, p. p. εἶσθαι, a. p. ἐθῆναι, ind. εἶθην.

ἰκνεῖσθαι (and poet. ἰκανεῖν or ἰκεῖν) to come or arrive; f. ἰξεσθαι, a. ἰκέσθαι, p. ἰχθαι, part. ἰγμένος.
ἱλασκεσθαι, to propitiate; f. ἱλασεσθαι, a. ἱλασασθαι, a. p. ἱλασθῆναι, imp. ἱλασθητι, for which poet. ἱλαθι or ἱληθι.

ἰστάναι, to set; f. στησεῖν, a. στήσαι, a. neut. στήναι, to stand, p. ἑστηκέναι and ἑστάναι, hyp. εἴστηκεῖν, p. p. ἑστάσθαι, ind. ἑσταμαι, a. p. σταθῆναι.

ἰσχεῖν (poet. σχεθεῖν), to hold; f. σχησεῖν, a. σχεῖν to get, imperat. σχεσ, p. εσχηκέναι, to have got, a. m. σχεσθαι, p. p. εσχῆσθαι, a. p. σχεθῆναι.

Καθεζεσθαι, to sit down (see ἔζεσθαι); imp. εκαθεζομην, f. καθεδεῖσθαι, while καθῆσθαι serves as a parakeimen.

καιεῖν or καεῖν, to burn; f. καυσεῖν, a. καῦσαι, poetic aorists κῆαι and καῆναι.

καλεῖν, to call; f. καλεσεῖν, a. καλεσαι, p. κεκληκέναι.

καμνεῖν, to toil; a. καμείν, p. κεκμηκέναι, to be weary.

κεραννύναι, to mix; f. κερασεῖν, p. p. κεκράσθαι, a. p. κραθῆναι.

κιχανεῖν and κιχανεσθαι (poet.) to catch; f. κιχησεσθαι, aorists κιχεῖν, κιχησασθαι, and κιχῆναι.

κλαιεῖν or κλαεῖν, to weep; f. m. κλαυσεσθαι, a. m. κλαυσασθαι.

κορεννύναι, to satisfy; f. κορεσεῖν, a. m. κορεσασθαι, p. p. κέκορέσθαι.

κραζειν, to cry out, chiefly used in p. κεκραγέναι, imperat. κεκραχθι, f. met. κεκραξέσθαι, a. κραγεῖν.

κρεμαννύναι, to suspend; f. κρεμασειν or κρεμᾶν, for p. p. κρεμασθαι, ind. κρεμαμαι, opt. κρεμαιμην, f. metol. κρεμησεσθαι, a. p. κρεμασθῆναι.

κτεινειν and κτιννύναι, to kill; f. κτενεῖν, a. κτεῖναι, p. εκτονέναι. An older aorist is κτανεῖν, also poet. κταναι, part. κτας.

κυνεῖν, to kiss; f. κυσειν, a. κυσαι.

Λαγχανειν, to obtain by lot; f. m. ληξεσθαι, a. λαχεῖν, p. ειληχέναι, also λελογχέναι.

λαμβανειν, to take or receive; f. m. ληψεσθαι, a. λαβεῖν, p. ειληφέναι.

λανθανειν and ληθειν, to lie hid, to elude; f. λησειν, a. λαθεῖν, p. λεληθέναι, p. p. λελῆσθαι.

λεγειν, to say; f. ερεῖν, a. ειπεῖν, p. ειρηκέναι, p. p. ειρήσθαι, f. metol. ειρησεσθαι, a. p. ρηθῆναι. But the regular forms, f. λεξειν, &c. are also in use.

λειπειν, to leave; f. λειψειν, a. λιπεῖν, p. λελοιπέναι, p. p. λελειφθαι, a. p. λειφθῆναι.

Μανθανειν, to learn; f. μαθησεσθαι, a. μαθεῖν, p. μεμαθηκέναι.

μαχεσθαι, to fight; f. μαχεῖσθαι, a. μαχεσασθαι, p. p. μεμαχῆσθαι.

μελειν, to concern; f. μελησειν, p. μεμεληκέναι, poet. μεμηλέναι. It is only used in the third person, as μελει μοι, it concerns me.

μιγνύναι and μισγειν, to mix; f. μιξειν, a. μιξαι, p. p. μεμίχθαι, a. p. μιχθῆναι or μιγῆναι.

μιμνησκειν, to remind; f. μνησειν. Pass. μιμνησκε-

- σθαι and μυῖσθαι, p. μεμνήσθαι, to remember; f. metol. μεμνησθαι, a. p. μνησθῆναι.
- Οζειν, to yield a smell; f. ὀζησειν or ὀζεσειν, p. poet. ὀδωδέναι.
- οιεσθαι, to be of opinion; ind. οιομαι and more commonly οἶμαι, οiei, οiεται; imperf. ὠομην or ὠμην, f. οiησεσθαι. Οἶεν is poetic.
- ολισθαινειν, to slip or slide; f. ολισθησειν, a. ολισθεῖν.
- ὀλλύναι, to destroy; f. ὀλεσειν or ὀλεῖν, a. ὀλέσαι, p. ὀλωλέκναι, p. neut. ὀλωλέναι, to be ruined, a. m. ὀλέσθαι, to perish, a. p. ὀλεσθῆναι.
- ομνύναι, to swear; f. ὀμοσειν, a. ὀμόσαι, p. ὀωμοκέναι, f. m. ὀμείσθαι, p. ὀωμόσθαι, ind. ὀωμομαι.
- ονινάναι, to benefit; ind. ονινημι, f. ονησειν, a. ονησαι, f. m. ονησεσθαι, a. m. οναςθαι, ind. ὠναμην.
- ὄρᾶν, to see; imperf. ἔωρων, f. m. ὀψεσθαι, a. ἰδεῖν,
p. ἔωρακέναι, a. m. ἰδέσθαι, p. p. ὤφθαι, a. p. ὀφθῆ-ναι. Ἐωρᾶσθαι and ὄραθῆναι are also used.
- ορνύναι, to stir up (poet.); f. ὀρσειν, a. ὀρσαι, p. ὀρω-ρέναι, to have arisen, f. m. ὀρεῖσθαι, a. m. ὀρέσθαι,
p. p. ὤρθαι.
- οσφραϊνεσθαι and οσφρᾶσθαι, to smell; f. οσφρη-σεσθαι, a. οσφρέσθαι.
- οφειλειν, to owe; f. ὀφειλησειν, old aor. ὀφελεῖν.
Hence ὀφλειν, to forfeit; f. ὀφλησειν.
- Πασχειν, to suffer or be affected; f. πεισεσθαι, a.
παθεῖν, p. πεπονθέναι.
- πεταννύναι, to spread; f. πετασειν or πετᾶν, a. πετάσαι, p. p. πεπτάσθαι.

πετεσθαι and ίπτασθαι, to fly; f. πτησεσθαι and πετησεσθαι, a. πτῆναι, a. m. πτεσθαι, which is chiefly used, and πτασθαι, p. p. πεποτῆσθαι.

πηγνύναι, to fix; f. πηξειν, a. πῆξαι, p. neut. πεπηγέναι, to be fixed, a. p. παγῆναι.

πιμπλάναι, to fill, and πληθειν, to grow full; f. πλησειν, p. πεπληκέναι, old p. neut. πεπληθέναι, p. p. πεπλήσθαι, a. p. πλησθῆναι. Πληθῆναι is also used, and πεπλημαι, whence by aphæresis επλημην, πλήσο.

πιμπράναι, to blow to a flame; f. πρησειν, part. p. p. πεπρησμένος.

πινειν, to drink; f. πιεσθαι and πιείσθαι, a. πιεῖν, imp. πие or πίθι, p. πεπωκέναι, p. p. πεπόσθαι. In a transitive sense we find πιπισκειν, to make drink; f. πισειν, a. πίσαι.

πιπρασκειν, to sell; f. πρασειν, p. πεπρακέναι, p. p. πεπρᾶσθαι, a. p. πραθῆναι.

πιπτειν, to fall; f. m. πεσεῖσθαι, a. πεσεῖν, p. πεπτωκέναι, part. πεπτωκὼς, also πεπτῶς.

πλεῖν, to make a voyage; f. m. πλευσεσθαι, a. πλεῦσαι, part. p. p. πεπλευσμένος.

πυνθανεσθαι, to inform oneself; f. πευσεσθαι, a. πυθέσθαι, p. πεπύσθαι.

Ρεζειν and ερδειν, to work (poet.); f. ρεξειν and ερξειν, a. ρεξαι and ερξαι, p. εοργέναι, a. p. ρεχθῆναι.

ρεῖν, to flow; f. ρευσεσθαι, p. ερρυηκέναι, a. p. ρυῆναι.

ρηγνύναι or ρησσειν, to break; f. ρηξειν, a. ρῆξαι, p. ερρηχέναι, p. neut. ερρωγέναι, to be broken, a. p. ραγῆναι.

ρωννύναι, to strengthen; f. ρωσειν, part. p. p. ερρωμένος, a. p. ρωσθήναι.

Σβεννύναι, to extinguish; f. σβεσειν, a. σβεσαι, p. εσβηκέναι, to be extinguished, a. p. σβεσθήναι and σβήναι.

σεινειν, to agitate (poet.); a. σεῦναι, a. m. σευασθαι, p. p. ind. εσσυμαι, part. εσσυμενος, a. ind. εσσυθην, part. συθείς. Εσσυμην, εσσυο, εσσυτο, may be the hypersyntelic, but seem rather to be used in the sense of an aorist: we also meet συτο, συθι, and συμενος.

σκεδαννύναι, to scatter; f. σκεδασειν, part. p. p. εσκεδασμένος.

στρωννύναι, to strew; f. στρωσειν and στορεσειν, a. στρώσαι and στορέσαι, p. p. εστρώσθαι and εστορέσθαι. The latter forms are rather poetical.

Τεινειν, to stretch; f. τενείν, p. τετακέναι, part. p. p. τεταμένος, a. p. ταθήναι.

τεμνειν, to cut; f. τεμείν, a. ταμείν, p. τετμηκέναι, a. p. τμηθήναι.

τετραινειν, to bore; f. τρησειν, part. p. p. τετρημένος.

τιθέναι, to put; f. θησειν, a. θείναι, p. τεθεικέναι, p. p. τεθείσθαι, a. p. τεθήναι.

τικτειν, to bring forth; f. τεξειν, a. τεκέιν, p. τετοκέναι, f. m. τεξεσθαι, which is most used; a. p. τεχθήναι.

τινειν, to pay (also τιννύναι, and poet. τιειν); f. τίσειν, a. τίσαι, part. p. p. τετισμένος.

τιτρωσκειν, to wound; f. τρωσειν, part. p. p. τετρωμένος.

τλῆναι, to dare (an aor. without a present) ; ind. ετλην, opt. τλαιν, f. τλησεσθαι, p. τετληκέναι and τετλάναι.

τρεχειν, to run ; f. m. δραμείσθαι, a. δραμείν, p. δεδραμηκέναι.

τυγχανειν, to get, or happen to be ; f. m. τευξεσθαι, a. τυχεῖν, p. τετυχηκέναι.

Φασκειν, to say ; as an ind. φημι, f. φησειν, a. φαναι and sometimes φῆσαι.

φερειν, to bear ; f. οισειν, a. ενεγκεῖν, ind. ηνεγκον and ηνεγκα, p. ενηνοχέναι, p. p. ενηνέχθαι.

φευγειν, to flee ; f. m. φευξεσθαι, a. φυγεῖν, p. πεφευγέναι.

φθανειν, to get before ; f. φθασειν, a. φθασαι and φθῆναι, p. εφθακέναι.

φυειν, to produce ; f. φυσειν, a. φῦσαι, a. neut. φῦναι, ind. εφυν, part. φυσ, p. neut. πεφυκέναι, a. p. φυῆναι.

Χαζειν and χαζεσθαι, to make room, to yield (poet.) ; a. χαδεῖν, and p. κεχανδέναι, to hold ; a. m. χασασθαι, p. p. κεκάσθαι, to surpass ; part. κεκασμένος. Connected with this is also an aorist, κεκαδεῖν, to drive from, and f. κεκαδησειν.

χαινειν, to gape ; a. χανεῖν, p. κεχηνέναι.

χαιρειν, to rejoice ; f. χαιρησειν, p. κεχαρηκέναι, p. p. κεχαρῆσθαι and poet. κεχάρθαι, a. p. χαρῆναι.

χεῖν, to pour ; f. χευσειν, a. χεῦναι and χαι, p. κεχυκέναι, p. p. κεχύσθαι, a. p. χυθῆναι.

χρῆν or χράν, also κιχράναι, to lend ; f. χρησειν.

Pass. χρήσθαι, to use ; ind. χρῶμαι, χρή, χρήται ;

f. χρησεσθαι, part. p. p. κεχρημένος, a. p. χρησθῆναι.

χρῆναι, to behave; imperson. ind. χρη, opt. χρειη, subj. χρῆ, imperf. εχρῆν or χρῆν, f. χρησει.

Ωθεῖν, to push; imperf. εωθουν, f. ωσειν, a. ῶσαι, p. εωκέναι, part. p. p. εωσμένος.

ωνεῖσθαι, to buy; f. ωνησεσθαι, a. ωνησασθαι, but more commonly πριασθαι; p. p. εωνῆσθαι, a. p. ωνηθῆναι, to be bought; ind. εωνηθην.

OF ADVERBS.

Adverbs may be known by their being properly joined to verbs, participles, and adjectives, to determine some further particular concerning their import, such as the manner, degree, time, or place of the action or quality expressed by them. They are equivalent to a periphrasis with a preposition and a noun.

Some adverbs are primary or original, such as νῦν, now; ἐκεῖ, there; εἰκῇ, rashly: but by far the greater part are formed from other words, especially from adjectives.

Almost all adjectives give origin to a corresponding adverb ending in ως, as σοφὸς, wise; σοφῶς, wisely; οξύς, sharp; οξέως, sharply; αληθής, true; αληθῶς, truly; χαρίεις, graceful; χαριεντως, gracefully.

In like manner they are formed from participles, as πρεποντως, becomingly, from πρεπων; ὁμολογουμενως, confessedly, from ὁμολογουμενος.

From verbs many are formed ending in δην and τι, as κρυβδην, secretly, from κρυπτειν; ἑλληνιστὶ, after the manner of the Greeks, from ἑλληνιζειν; εθελοντὶ, willingly, from εθελειν.

From nouns many are formed in δον or in ει, as κυνηδὸν, like a dog; ὁμοθυμαδὸν, with one mind; αμαχει, without fighting.

Adverbs of place, answering to the questions where? whither? whence? have appropriate terminations: as, where? ουρανόθι, in heaven; αγρόθι, in the country; Αθηνησι, in Athens; οὔ, where; πανταχοῦ, every where: whither? ουρανόνδε, to heaven; οικαδε, home; χαμᾶζε, to the ground; ἐκείσε, thither: whence? ουρανόθεν, from heaven; Αθηνηθεν, from Athens.

Adverbs of time end chiefly in τε, as ότε, when; παντοτε, always; εστε, until.

Adverbs of number end in ις or κις, as δις, twice; πεντάκις, five times; πολλάκις, often; ποσάκις, how often?

The relative adverbs have little systems founded on them analogous to those of the pronouns: as οὔ, where; που, somewhere; ποῦ, where? ὅπου, where, wherever: ὅτε, when; τότε, then; ποτε, at some time; ποτε, when? ὅποτε, when, whenever.

The adverbial particles α and δυσ are used only in composition; as ατιμος, without honor; δυσλυτος, hard to loosen: to which may be added νη and ερι; as νηκερδής, unprofitable; εριτιμος, of great value.

Some adverbs have degrees of comparison ; as κατω, below, κατωτερω, κατωτατω ; εγγυς, near, εγγυτερω, εγγυτατω ; μαλα, much, μαλλον, μαλιστα.

Instead of adverbs nothing is commoner than the use of adjectives in the neuter gender, especially in the comparative and superlative degrees ; as σοφωτερον, more wisely ; σοφωτατα, most wisely.

OF PREPOSITIONS.

The principal Prepositions are the following :

αμφι , about , on either hand ;	μετα , with , after ; (attending) ;
ανα , up , up along ;	παρα , by , beside ;
αντι , for , instead of ;	περι , about , over ;
απο , from ;	προ , before ;
δια , through ; (division) ;	προς , to , towards ;
εις or εσ , into , unto ;	συν or ξυν , together with ;
εξ or εκ , out of ;	(union) ;
εν , in ;	υπερ , over , above ;
επι , on ;	υπο , under , by .
κατα , down , against ;

Note.—The extensive use of the prepositions in composition is one of the most remarkable features of the Greek language, and demands the student's particular attention. Sometimes several enter at once into the composition of a single word, as συνεπανιστασθαι, to make insurrection together, from συν, επι, ανα, and ιστασθαι.

OF CONJUNCTIONS.

The Greek language is exceedingly rich in conjunctive particles, which contribute much to its force and delicacy of expression, and deserve to be attentively studied.

Some conjunctions are commonly placed at the beginning of a sentence or clause : such are και, and ; αλλὰ, but ; αυτὰρ, but ; ει, if ; εὰν, if ; ἵνα, that ; ὅτι, that ; ὥς, that : there are others which must always be subjoined to another word ; as γαρ, for ; δη, at length ; αὖ, again ; οὖν, therefore ; μην, yet ; μεν, indeed, distinctive ; δε, and or but, simply conjunctive.

Many conjunctions are used as enklitick appendages to other words : such are τε, γε, περ, που, τοι, ουν, and others.

ON ETYMOLOGY.

Etymology teaches us to trace derived and compounded words to their originals.

It is useful to the learner to be acquainted with the more common forms of derivatives, inasmuch as it will frequently assist him to their meaning in reading, while it will suggest them to his memory and sanction his employment of them in writing.

Derivatives are generally formed by adding to an original base or root certain significant terminations, the principal of which will be exhibited in the examples below.

With respect to the base to which these terminations are annexed, it is of importance to observe that it consists for the most part only of the radical or fixed part of the original words, the variable terminations not entering into the derivatives, and that it is therefore only this part that we can expect to trace in them. Only between the terminations of the original and the derivative there is a certain correspondence.

Derivative nouns flow chiefly from other nouns, adjectives, and verbs.

Those from nouns are, 1st, Feminines; as δουλ-η, a maid-servant, from δουλ-ος.

προφήτ-ις, G. -ῖδος, a prophetess, from προφήτ-ης.

θεραπ-εινᾶ, a female attendant, from θεραπ-ων.

σωτ-ειρᾶ, a female deliverer, from σωτ-ήρ.

ποιη-τριᾶ, a poetess, from ποιή-της.

βασιλ-ειᾶ and βασιλ-ισσᾶ, a queen, from βασιλ-εύς.

ανα-σσᾶ, a queen, from ανα-ξ.

2. Hypokoristicks or diminutives: as παιδ-ίσκος or -ίσκη, a young boy or girl, from παῖς, G. παιδ-ός.

βιβλ-ιον, a little roll or book, from βιβλ-ος.

οικ-ιδιον, a little house or cottage, from οἶκ-ος.

παιδ-ᾶριον, a little child, from παις.

πινακ-ῖς, G. -ῖδος, a little tablet, from πιναξ, G. πινακ-ος.

φυσα-λῖς, G. -λῖδος, a bubble, from φυσα, a bellows.

ερωτ-ῦλος, a darling, from ερως, love, G. ερωτ-ος.

μειρακ-υλλῖον, a little youth, from μειραξ, G. μειρακ-ος.

νησ-υδριον, an islet, from νῆσ-ος.

3. Nouns of place or possession : as διδασκαλ-εῖον, a school, from διδασκαλ-ος.

γυναικ-ὼν, the women's apartment, from γυνή, G. γυναικ-ός.

γαστρ-ων, one with a large belly, from γαστήρ, G. γαστρ-ός.

4. Patronymics or nouns of descent : as Πριαμ-ῖδης, a son of Priam, from Πριαμ-ος.

Ασκληπι-ᾶδης, a descendant of Asklepios, from Ασκληπι-ος.

Κρον-ῖων, a son of Kronos, from Κρον-ος.

Ατλαντ-ῖς, G. -ῖδος, a daughter of Atlas, from Ατλας, G. Ατλαντ-ος.

Ωκεαν-ῖνη, a daughter of Ocean, from Ωκεαν-ος.

αδελφ-ῖδους, a nephew, from αδελφ-ός.

αηδον-ῖδεὺς, a young nightingale, from αηδών, G. αηδόν-ος.

5. Nouns of country : as Δηλ-ῖτης, one of Delos, from Δηλ-ος.

Αιγιν-ήτης, one of Aigine, from Αιγιν-η.

Σικελι-ώτης, one of Sicily, from Σικελί-α.

Ἀλικαρνασσ-εὺς, one of Halicarnassos, from Ἀλικαρνασσ-ός.

Κορινθ-ιος, one of Corinth, from Κορινθ-ος.

Αθην-αῖος, one of Athens, from Αθῆν-αι.

Αλεξανδρ-ῖνος, one of Alexandria, from Αλεξαῦδρ-εία.

Εκβαταν-ηνός, one of Ekbatana, from Εκβαταν-α.

Ιθακ-ησιος, one of Ithaca, from Ιθάκ-η.

Note.—The five last forms are also used as adjectives.

Nouns derived from adjectives are chiefly such as serve to denote abstract qualities : as φιλ-οτης, endearment, and } φιλ-ος, dear. φιλ-ϊᾱ, friendship, from } ταχ-υτης, swiftness, from ταχ-ύς.

ευσεβ-ειᾱ, piety, from ευσεβ-ής.

σωφρ-οσύνη, sobriety, from σωφρ-ων.

Nouns derived from verbs are of such forms as follow :—

1. Active nouns in σις and σια, from the aorist ; as ποιη-σις, invention, from ποιῆ-σαι.

δοκιμα-σίᾱ, proof, from δοκιμά-σαι.

2. Nouns in μα and μος, from the parakeimen passive ; as ποιη-μᾱ, a poem, or work of any kind, from πεποιῆ-σθαι.

ασπασ-μός, a salutation, from ησπάσ-θαι.

3. Active nouns masculine in της, τηρ, τωρ, and εὺς; as ποιη-της, a poet, from πεποιή-σθαι.

πρα-τήρ, a seller, from πεπρά-σθαι.

κτη-τωρ, a possessor, from κεκτή-σθαι.

ἱερ-εὺς, a priest, from ἱερ-ευν.

4. And others; as μον-ή, an abode, from μενειν, old par. μεμον-έναι.

τομ-ος, a section, from τεμνειν, old par. τετομ-έναι.

δουλ-είᾱ, servitude, from δουλ-ευν.

εργασ-τηριον, a workshop, from ειργάσ-θαι.

Derivative adjectives flow chiefly from nouns.

πολεμ-ῖος, hostile, from πολεμ-ος.

ὦρ-αῖος, comely, from ὦρ-α.

βο-ειος, belonging to an ox, from βοῦς. G. βο-ός.

χρυσ-εος, -οῦς, golden, from χρυσ-ός.

πολεμ-ῖκός, pertaining to war, from πολεμ-ος.

καρδι-ᾰκός, pertaining to the heart, from καρδί-α.

χαρί-εις, graceful, from χαρις.

δενδρ-ήεις, woody, from δενδρ-ος. G. -εος.

ανθεμ-όεις, flowery, from ανθεμ-ον.

ξύλ-ινος, wooden, from ξύλ-ον.

σκοτ-εινός, darksome, from σκοτ-ος. G. -εος.

εδωδ-ιμός, eatable, from εδωδ-ή.

πετρ-ωδης, rocky, from πετρ-α.

κερδ-αλέος, crafty, from κερδ-ος.

απατ-ηλός, deceitful, from απάτ-η or απατ-ᾱν.

στωμ-ύλος, talkative, from στομ-α.

δολ-ερὸς, guileful, from δολ-ος.

λυπ-ηρὸς, grievous, from λυπ-η.

οικτ-ρὸς, lamentable, from οἶκτ-ος. [ελε-εῖν.

ελε-ημων, compassionate, from ελε-ος. G. -εος or πλουτ-αξ, very rich, from πλουτ-ος.

Those in -ης are generally compounds; as ροδοειδ-ής, like a rose, from ροδον and εἶδος.

Of derivative verbs the most common forms are such as follow :—

πολεμ-ιζειν, to make war, from πολεμ-ος.

νε-αζειν, to play the youth, from νε-ος.

ωχρι-ᾶν, to be pale, from ωχρί-α.

φιλ-εῖν, to caress, from φιλ-ος.

δηλ-οῦν, to make manifest, from δῆλ-ος.

πτωχ-ευειν, to live in poverty, from πτωχ-ός.

πλατ-υνειν, to widen, from πλατ-ύς.

θερμ-αινειν, to warm, from θερμ-η or θερμ-ός.

γαμησ-ειν, to wish to marry, from γαμήσ-αι.

Of Compound Words.

In the richness, elegance, and perspicuity of its compounds the Greek excels all other known languages: the method of combination is, however, so simple as to need little remark.

When a noun is prefixed to another word we very commonly find its radical part connected with what follows by the insertion of an ο: as θαλασσοκρατωρ, ruling the sea; οφιοδηκτος, bitten by a snake; πηγορρυτος, flowing from a spring. But if the latter word begin with a vowel the o is not required: as φιλανδρος, fond of men; λευκωλενος, white-armed.

Other particulars on this subject will be learnt in reading.

OF THE DIALECTS.

The student should now be informed that the Greek language, as it occurs in different authors, is not altogether one and the same. It presents certain varieties according to the places or periods in which it was written, and hence arises the distinction of Dialects. Of these occasional notices have already occurred, and we shall now proceed to give some further brief account of them.

Four varieties of dialect are principally to be noticed; namely, the Attic, Ionic, Doric, and Æolic.

1. The Attic, during the independence of the Greek republics, prevailed in the city and territory of Athens, and in later days became, in a great measure, the general language of literature and educated persons. Its peculiarities are most fully displayed in the comic writings of Aristophanes, and they are also found in the works of Thucydides, Aristotle, Plato, Xenophon, Demosthenes, and the Tragedians, with many other authors. It was of all the dialects the most elegant, and best adapted to the common intercourse of life.

The Attics preferred in general short and contracted forms; thus they said ταυτὸ for το αὐτὸ, εγῶδα for ἐγὼ οἶδα, προυργου for προ εργου, κερως for κερατος, and the like.

They prefer ρρ to ρς, as αρρην, male, instead of αρσην; and ττ to σσ, as θαλαττα, the sea, for θαλασσα.

They often substitute εω for αο and εο, as λεὼς for λαὸς, a people; πολεως for πολeos, of a town.

They put ει for η in the second person passive, as γενησει for γενηση, thou wilt become.

2. The Ionic in its origin was nearly allied to the Attic, being spoken among the Athenian colonists in the Lesser Asia. It had a richness and softness very suitable for poetry. It is preserved in the poems of Homer, and in the prose works of Herodotus and Hippocrates.

The Ionic, contrary to the Attic, loved a concurrence of open vowels. Hence they commonly retained the uncontracted forms, saying ποιειν for ποιεῖν, τειχεος for τειχους, and the like.

They said also, on the same principle, σημηια for σημεία, ύμέας for ύμᾶς, προφητεω for προφητου, λιμνεων for λιμνῶν, λυσεαι in the second person for λυση, θωυμα for θαῦμα, with numberless other instances of the same kind.

They retained η after vowels and ρ instead of changing it into α; as φιλήη for φίλια, ελευθερη for ελευθερα.

They put ευ for ου; as ποιεῦντες for ποιοῦντες.

They often reject the aspiration; as εποράν for εφοράν.

In the dative plural, for λογοις, they say λογοισι; and for τραπεζαις, τραπεζησι.

In the pronouns they use κ for π; as ὀκόσος for ὀπόσος, ὀκως for ὀπως.

3. The Doric was spoken in Doris and the Peloponnesus, and among the Greek colonists in Italy and Sicily. It was comparatively harsh and uncultivated, as most of those who spoke it were but little addicted to literature and the fine arts. Many of its forms appear in the writings of Theocritus and Pindar, as well as in the choruses of the Tragedians, but these elegant writers used it with much reserve, avoiding its harsher peculiarities.

The Doric is distinguished by the prevalence of the broad a: as in μαν for μην, a month; έλοιμαν for έλοιμην, I should take; τᾶν τιμᾶν for τῶν τιμῶν, of the honors; πᾶτος for πῶτος, first; Αινεία for Αινέλου, of Æneus.

They often put ω for ου and αυ: as μωσας for μοισας, muses; τρῶμα for τραῦμα, a wound.

They put σδ for ζ: as μελιδειν, to sing, for μελιζειν.

They made the future active always perispomen: as νομευσῶ for νομευσω, I will feed.

In the first and third persons plural they said λυομες, λυοντι, for λυομεν, λυσουσι.

In the infinitive they put εν for ειν: as γαρύεν, to sing, for γηρυειν.

4. The Æolic, near akin to the Doric, was spoken in Bœotia and other northern parts of Greece, in Lesbos and other islands, and in Æolia in the Lesser Asia. Nothing remains in this dialect except a few poetic fragments, such as those of Sappho and Alcæus, and some traces of it in Homer. The Latin language has a nearer affinity to this than to either of the other dialects.

So little remaining of the Æolic, its peculiarities are imperfectly known : it is common, however, to refer to it the poetic genitives of the first declension, such as νεφεληγερεταο, μελισσαων, for νεφεληγερέτου, μελισσῶν.

They often put οι for ου ; as μοῖσα for μουσα : and αις for ας ; as καλαις for καλὰς, fair women ; μελαις for μελας, black ; πειναις for πεινᾶς, thou hungerest.

They also reject oxytons, carrying back the accent, and prefixed to many vowels the obsolete letter called digamma.

The foregoing examples are to be considered merely as specimens of the several dialects, by which the student may be prepared to distinguish others when they occur in reading.

It should be further observed that the poets also have various forms of their own, which it would be lost labour to endeavour to refer to any one dialect in particular. Among these we may notice the lengthening of vowels and doubling of consonants for the sake of the metre ; as in ᾰθανατος for ἄθανατος, κουρη for κορη, ὅσσος for ὅσος, βελεσσι for βελεσι : also the use of syncope in words compounded with prepositions ; as καμμενειν for καταμενειν, αμβασις for αναβασις, κατθανεῖν for καταθανεῖν, καδδε for κατὰ δε.

Such forms as were common to all, or at least to several, of these dialects, were called by grammarians Hellenic ; and these began early to be preferred by men of letters to the provincial peculiarities. To this common language the Attic dialect always lay nearer than either of the others, and the difference was continually lessened by the progress of letters, so that at length the best Attic prose writers approached that standard very nearly. Their superior excellence, and the renown of Athens as a school of philosophy, caused their writings to be regarded as the model of that sort of composition ; and when the conquests of the Macedonians and Romans had abolished the political distinctions of the Grecian states, their influence on literature prevailed more and more, so that at length a language consisting of common Hellenic with a mixture of Atticism, and nearly the same with that of the great Attic prose writers, was adopted by almost all authors, and became what it still remains—standard Greek.

It is this standard which is exhibited as the model of the language throughout the pages of this grammar.

PART THE THIRD.

OF SYNTAXIS OR CONSTRUCTION.

Syntaxis teaches the just adaptation of the several parts of speech to one another when they are combined together in sentences.

This adaptation takes place especially in two instances, namely in agreement and in government, which therefore form the leading divisions of the subject.

For the sake of order we will begin with a sentence in its simplest form, and introducing one by one the elements by which it may be made more complex, we will deliver as we proceed the rules which are proper to each.

1. Agreement of the Noun and Verb.

Every sentence must consist at least of a verb and a noun or pronoun, either expressed or understood, as the subject of that verb.

Rule 1. The noun which is the subject of a personal verb must be put in the nominative case, and the verb must agree with it in number and person : as εγὼ τρεχω, I run.

Θεὸς προσκυνεῖται, God is worshipped.

σφῶ εριδαινετον, ye two quarrel.

ὕμεις ἄλλεσθε, ye leap.

κλῦθι μεν, Αργυροτόξ', ὅς Χρυσην ἀμφιβεβηκας (Hom.), hear me, O god of the silver bow, who protectest Khryse.

Obs. 1. The former part of this rule does not extend to verbs in the second person of the imperative mood, whose subject is most properly in the vocative.

Obs. 2. Relative pronouns are one in person with their antecedents.

Obs. 3. Nouns in general are in the third person, except εγω and συ, and such as are in agreement with these, either expressed or understood.

Obs. 4. A personal pronoun is seldom expressed before the verb except where some emphasis or distinction is intended : as οὐκ ἐστὶν ὧδε, ἀνέστη, he is not here, he has risen.

τι πρὸς ἡμᾶς ; συ οψεί, what is it to us? look thou to it.

Exception 1. Nouns neuter, though in the plural, are usually joined to a verb singular ; as κύματα ὀρωρεῖ, the waves were risen.

Except. 2. The dual may agree with the plural ; as τω δ' ἐγγύθεν ἦλθον (Hom.), they two came near.

ποταμοὶ συμβαλλετον ὕδωρ (Hom.), two rivers unite their water.

Except. 3. Collective nouns, though in the singular, are often joined with a verb plural; as Αθηναιων το πλῆθος οιονται (Thuc.), the multitude of the Athenians is of opinion.

Rule 2. Two or more nouns singular coupled together by a conjunctive particle, such as και, and, require a verb plural; but if the particle be disjunctive, such as η, or, the verb ought to be singular: as Πετρος και Ιωάννης ανεβαινον εις το ιερόν, Peter and John were going up into the temple.

Rule 3. When two or more nominatives of different persons are connected with the same verb, the verb will agree with the first person rather than the second, and with the second rather than the third; as εγὼ και συ πολλὰ δη και ειπομεν και επραξαμεν (Xen.), I and you have both said and done many things.

Rule 4. The verb εἶναι, to be, is very commonly omitted when its sense is sufficiently implied in the context; as και ουδὲν ὅτι ουκ ὑπεςχετο (Herod.), and there was nothing which he did not promise.
Κυριος ὁ Θεὸς ευλογητὸς, the Lord God be blessed.

2. Agreement of the Noun with the Adjective.

Rule 5. The adjective, pronoun, or participle must agree with the noun to which it refers in gender, number, and case ; as λογος προφητικὸς, a prophetic saying.

ταῖς καλαῖς γυναιξίν, to the beautiful women.

πῦρ ἀναλίσκον, a consuming fire.

Obs. 1. This agreement between nouns and adjectives takes place not only when they are joined immediately together, but likewise when they are connected by certain verbs, especially such as signify to be, to appear, or to be named ; as οὐκ ἐνδωσομεν προφασιν οὐδένι κακῷ γενέσθαι (Thuc.), we will allow no one a pretence for behaving ill.

καλὸν Ἑλληνα οὐτα φιλελληνα εἶναι (Xen.), it is becoming that one who is a Greek should be fond of Greeks.

Σωκράτης τυγχάνει περιπατῶν, Socrates happens to be walking.

ἢ ὑμετέρα πιστοῦτος μείζων φανείη αν, your fidelity would appear the greater.

δευτεραῖος ἀφικετο, he arrived on the second day.

Obs. 2. The noun with which the adjective agrees is frequently not expressed, being implied in pronouns or otherwise understood ; as εἰ δὲ συ καρτερός εσσι (Hom.), and although thou art brave ; that is, a brave man.

ἐγενοντο οἱ συμπάντες μυρίοι καὶ χίλιοι (Xen.), they made altogether eleven thousand ; that is, men.

οὐκ ἀγαθὸν πολυκοιρανίη, the rule of many is not good ; that is, not a good thing.

τ' ἀμὰ δυστηνου κακὰ (Soph.), my evils, a miserable man's.

Obs. 3. In such cases the noun is sometimes subjoined in the genitive case; as οἱ φαῦλοι τῶν ἀνθρώπων, the baser sort of men.

πολλή τῆς χώρας (Xen.), much of the country.

Except. 1. The dual may agree with the plural; as φιλᾶς περὶ χεῖρε βαλῶμεν, let us embrace with affectionate hands.

δυο χάσματα ἐχομένῳ ἀλλήλοιν, (Plat.), two chasms adjoining one another.

Except. 2. The masculine termination of dual adjectives, participles, and pronouns very commonly serves instead of the feminine; as τούτοις τοῖς κινήσειν (Plat.), of these two motions.

ὥσπερ εἰ τῷ χεῖρε, ὥς ὁ Θεὸς ἐπὶ τὸ συλλαμβάνειν ἀλλήλαις ἐποίησεν, ἀφεμένῳ τούτου, τραποῖντο πρὸς τὸ διακωλύειν ἀλλήλῳ (Xen.), as if the two hands which God made to act in concert, forsaking this, should turn to hindering one another.

δυο τινε ἐστὸν ιδέα, ἀρχοντε καὶ ἀγοντε, οἷον ἐπομέθα (Plat.), there are two ideas ruling and leading us, which we follow.

Rule 6. If an adjective be connected at once with several nouns of different genders, in things living, the masculine gender will be preferred to the feminine, and the feminine to the neuter; but in things without life the neuter gender prevails; as τῶν αὐτῶν ἀμφοτεροὶ δεόνται καὶ ἡ γυνή καὶ ὁ ανήρ (Plat.), both the woman and the man stand in need of the same things.

λιθοι τε και πλινθοι και ξυλα και κεραμος ατακτως ερριμμένα (Xen.), both stones and bricks and pieces of wood and tiling thrown about in confusion.

3. Agreement of the Relative Pronoun with its Antecedent.

Rule 7. The relative pronoun agrees with its antecedent in gender and number; as οἶνος σε τρωει μελιηδής ὅς τε και αλλους βλαπτει (Hom.), sweet wine wounds thee which also injures others.

αμαθής γε ὅστις οὕτωςι σφοδρα την θυραν λελακτικας (Aristoph.), an illiterate fellow thou art who hast kicked the door with such violence: where the antecedent is συ understood.

Obs. The omission of the antecedent when a pronoun and unemphatic, as being sufficiently implied in the relative itself, is the common idiom of the language; as συν οἷς μαλιστα φιλεῖς (Xen.), with those whom you love most; for ἐκεινοῖς οἷς.

οὐδέν πραξαιμ' αν ὧν ου σοι φιλον (Soph.), I would do nothing displeasing to you; for ἐκείνων ὧν.

Note.—The clauses introduced into a sentence by a relative are of two kinds: the one is independent, and may be otherwise expressed by means of a personal or demonstrative pronoun; as τοιαῦτα φῆμαι μαντικαὶ διωρισαν, ὧν εντρεπού συ ουδέν (Soph.), for ἀλλὰ τουτων συ εντρεπου, &c. such things the prophetic oracles have declared, of which you make no account : the other sort of clause is dependent or hypotactic, and may often be paraphrased by help of the participle ; as ὅς ηδὲ τα τ' εὐόντα, τα τ' εσσομένα, προ τ' εὐόντα, (Hom.) which is equivalent to ὁ εἰδὼς τα τ' εὐόντα, &c. who knew both the present things and the future and the past : again, μητι γένοιτο ὅτι παντὰς ἡμᾶς λυπησεί, (Xen.) which may be read μητι γένοιτο παντὰς ἡμᾶς λυπήσον, lest something should happen which will grieve us all.

It may sometimes be useful to paraphrase a clause in this manner in order to decide whether the definite or indefinite relative ought to be used, as the definite relative will in general be proper in the same cases as, when paraphrased, would require the definite article.

Rule 8. The relative most commonly agrees in case also with the antecedent, when the latter is in the genitive or dative, and the former would otherwise be in the accusative ; as ἀγων ἀπὸ τῶν πόλεων ὧν ἐπεισε στρατιάν (Thuc.), bringing an army from the towns which he had gained over.

χρῆσθαι ταῖς συνθήκαις μὴ ταύταις αἷς νῦν τινες γεγραφασιν (Plat.), to observe as treaties not those which some have now written.

ἐλαττω τῶν τοιούτων κακῶν οἷων εἶπομεν (Plat.), less evils than such as are mentioned.

Rule 9. On the other hand the antecedent sometimes takes the case proper to the relative, which in such instances generally precedes it ; as κατασκευάζοντα ἧς ἀρχοὶ χώρας (Xen.), preparing a country which he might govern.

4. On the Relations of Nouns to each other, and on certain uses of the Cases.

Rule 10. Two or more nouns applied at once to the same person or thing are said to be in apposition, and are put in the same case ; as αγαπησεις Κυριον τον Θεόν σου, thou shalt love the Lord thy God.

Rule 11. Of two nouns referring to different things the relation is commonly expressed by putting in the genitive case that one which is dependent in the sentence on the other ; as πολλῶν δ' ανθρωπων ιδεν αστεα, and he saw the cities of many men.

εμὸς τοῦ ταλαιπωρου βιος (Aristoph.), my life, a wretch's as I am.

Obs. 1. The genitive is sometimes dependent on a noun understood ; as εις Ἄδου, for εις οἶκον Ἄδου, to the house of Hades.

Θουκυδίδης Ολορου, Thucydides, son of Olorus.

Obs. 2. There are, however, relations of noun to noun which are better expressed by the dative ; as ευεργέτης τοῖς φιλοις, a benefactor to his friends.
συνεργος τοῖς τεχνίταις, a cooperator with the artisans.

Rule 12. These relations of nouns obtain equally after connective verbs ; as ὁ λογος σαρξ εγενετο, the word became flesh.

εγενετο χρηματίσαι πρῶτον ἐν Ἀντιοχείᾳ τοὺς μαθητὰς Χριστιανοὺς, it came to pass that the disciples were called Christians first in Antioch.

Θεοῦ ἐστὶ τὸ δῶρον, the gift is God's.

Rule 13. In nouns of time and place, unaccompanied by prepositions, such as answer to the question where? in what place? and when? during what time?
are commonly put in the genitive; as οἷη οὐκ ἐστὶ γυνή οὐτ' Ἰθάκης οὐτ' Ἠπείροιο (Hom.), such a woman as there is not either in Ithaca or Epirus.

τῆς αὐτῆς ἡμέρας (Thuc.), in the same day.

ἡμερῶν ὀλίγων (Plat.), within a few days.

Such as answer to the question where? at what place? or when? at what time? are commonly put in the dative; as [rathon.

Μαραθῶνι ὅτ' ἦμεν (Plat.), when we were at Ma- ρηματι κεν τριτατῷ Φθιην ἐριβῶλον ἰκοιμην (Hom.), on the third day I should arrive at fertile Phthia.

Such as answer to the question how far? how long?
are commonly put in the accusative; as τριάκοντα σταδίου προεληλυθεσαν (Xen.), they had advanced thirty furlongs.

εμαχοντο δεκα ἐνιαυτοὺς (Hesiod.), they fought ten years.

Rule 14. The nominative is sometimes used in addresses even where there is a proper vocative; as ἐλεησον με, ὁ Θεός, have mercy on me, O God.

Rule 15. In exclamations either the nominative, genitive, or accusative may be used, according to circumstances ; as ω δυσταλαινα εγώ ! O wretch that I am !

τῆς αναιδείας ! what impudence !

ω εμέ δειλαιον ! O coward that I am !

5. On the government of the Noun by the Adjective and Verb.

Rule 16. When a noun is governed by an adjective it is generally found in the genitive case ; as συγγνωμων τῶν ανθρωπινων ἀμαρτηματων (Xen.), compassionate towards human errors.

ατιμος τῶν επαινων (Plat.), unhonored by praises.
εμπειρος ειμι τῆς χωρας (Xen.), I am acquainted with the country.

καρδίας δηκτηρια (Eurip.), things that wound the heart.

παρασκευαστικὸς τῶν εις τον πολεμον (Xen.), provident in the matters that regard the war.

ακλαυστος φιλων, unlamented by friends.

Obs. 1. This rule especially applies to nouns dependent on adjectives in the comparative and superlative degrees, and others of similar import ; as τῆς πολυπραγμοσύνης ουδὲν κενεωτερον αλλο, nothing is vainer than impertinent curiosity.

νεωτατος δ' ἦν Πριαμιδῶν (Eurip.), I was the youngest of the sons of Priam.

οὐδὲν διαφορὸς τῶν ἄλλων πόλεων (Xen.), not at all different from the other cities.

ὑπείροχος ἄλλων (Hom.), excelling others.

Obs. 2. When the particle η, than, is employed, the noun which follows it will be put in the same case with that which precedes it, unless it be taken as the nominative to some verb expressed or understood; as ἐκ δεινότερων η τοιῶνδε ἐσωθήσαν (Thuc.), they were delivered from more formidable things than such as these.

ἐνὸς πολὺ δυνατότερου η ἐγὼ υἱός, for η ἐγὼ εἰμι (Xen.), a son of one much more powerful than I am.

Obs. 3. The comparative and superlative degrees are often used absolutely, that is, without any particular object of comparison being expressed; as αὐθαδέστερον τι ἀπεκρίνατο (Thuc.), he replied somewhat insolently.

φῦναι ὁ Κυρὸς λέγεται εἶδος μὲν καλλιστος (Xen.), Cyrus is said to have been extremely handsome.

Rule 17. Certain adjectives, from the nature of their signification, more commonly or even always govern a dative; such especially are those which signify advantage, favor, identity, similitude, propriety, fellowship, and the like, with their contraries; as εοικας τα ἐκαστῷ ὠφελιμα κτήματα καλεῖν (Xen.), you appear to call possessions such things as are useful to each person.

εχθρῶν τῇ τε πολει και τῇ Ἑλλάδι (Xen.), hostile both to the city and to Greece.

εν τῷ αὐτῷ κινδυνῷ τοῖς φαυλοτατοῖς (Thuc.), in the same danger with the meanest.

φοροὶ οἱ αὐτῷ ἱδιοὶ ἦσαν (Xen.), the revenues which were his own.

κοινόν τι χαρᾷ και λυπῇ δακρυα εστι (Xen.), tears are something common to joy and grief.

εθνῶν ἤρξε ουθ' ἑαυτῷ ὁμογλωττων οντων ουτε αλληλοῖς (Xen.), he governed nations not agreeing in language either with himself or with one another.

Rule 18. An accusative is often subjoined both to adjectives and verbs expressive of something to which their sense is more particularly directed or limited, and requiring that in English some phrase equivalent to "with respect to," should be supplied; as πατρίδα Ρωμαῖος, with respect to his country a Roman :

δακτυλον αλγῶ τοῦτον (Theoc.), I have a pain in this finger :

τους Ἕλληνας ουδέν πω σαφὲς λεγεται εἰ ἐπονται (Xen.), with respect to the Greeks nothing clear is yet told us whether they follow :

and hence adverbially, την αρχήν, at the first ; το τέλος, finally ; ταχος, quickly ; δωρεάν, as a gift ; χαριν, for the sake of ; and others.

Note.—Before these accusatives some preposition, such as κατα, would seem to be understood.

Rule 19. The noun which follows a verb of active signification, to express the thing which is most immediately affected by its action, is in general put in the accusative case; as τον Θεὸν φοβείσθε, τον βασιλέα τιμᾶτε, fear God, honor the king.

ἡ Κυthereia ζητεῖ λυσασθαι τον ερωτα (Anacr.), Kythereia seeks to ransom love.

Rule 20. Many verbs admit a second accusative for a person or thing affected more remotely; as ὑπισχνοῦ ποιησειν αγαθα ἡμᾶς (Xen.), you promised to treat us well.

ταυτὶ λεγεις συ τον στρατηγὸν, πτωχὸς ων; (Aristoph.) dost thou, poor as thou art, say this to the general?

εὖ λεγειν τον εὖ λεγοντα, και εὖ ποιεῖν τον εὖ ποιοῦντα (Xen.), to speak well of him that speaks well of us, and to treat well him that treats us well.

ηρωτα τους αυτομολους τα εκ τῶν πολεμιων (Xen.), he enquired of the deserters concerning the affairs of the enemy.

το τυραννικὸν αιτημα, αιτεῖν τον δῆμον φυλακας τινας τοῦ σωματος (Plat.), the request of tyrants, to request of the people some body guards.

μηδὲ συ τονδ', αγαθός περ εὖν, αποαιρεο κουρην (Hom.), neither do thou, although thou art noble, take away from him the girl.

τον μεν εαυτοῦ χιτῶνα εκείνον ημφιεσε, τον δε εκεί-σου αὐτὸς ἐνέδν (Xen.), his own coat he put upon that man, and his he put on himself.

πολλὰ διδάσκει με ὁ πολὺς βίος (Eurip.), my long life teaches me many things.

τοῦτο σε κελευομεν (Xen.), this we command thee.

Rule 21. Even verbs that are properly neuter sometimes govern an accusative, especially such as signify motion; as οὐδέν σε λεληθε (Xen.), nothing is concealed from you.

βεβηκε την πανυστατην ὁδῶν, he is gone the last of journies.

ἦλθε Πολυνείκης χθονα (Eurip.), he went to the land of Polyneike.

Rule 22. Various verbs, in the place of the accusative, take a dative after them; such especially are those which signify to benefit, to help, to please, to obey, to follow, to suit, to resemble, to use, and the like, with their contraries; as ἐν τοῖς κακοῖς χρη τοῖς φιλοισιν ὠφελεῖν (Eurip.), in adversity it behoves us to be of service to our friends.

αδικουμενοι βοηθοῖτε (Xen.), ye would assist the injured.

οὐκ Ἀγαμεμνονι ἠνδανε, it did not please Agamemnon, ἐπειθετο μυθῳ, he obeyed the command.

τῷ ἡγεμόνι ἑπείσθαι (Xen.), to follow the leader.
 τῇ ἡλικίᾳ ἐπρέπε (Xen.), it became his age.
 μεθυουσιν ἐώκεσαν (Xen.), they were like men drunk.
 ἡμῖν ἐχρῶντο ὥς ἐκείνοις ἦν ἡδιστον (Xen.), they used or treated us as was most agreeable to them.

Rule 23. Other verbs take a dative in addition to an accusative ; such are those which signify to give, to pay, to add, to pardon, to tell, to show, with many others ; as τῶν αγαθῶν οὐδὲν ἀνευ πονοῦ θεοὶ δίδοασιν ἀνθρώποις (Xen.), the gods give no good thing to men without labor.

ἀλλὰ ὑμῖν ἀποτισεῖν (Xen.), he would pay you in another way.

Ἀχαιοῖς ἀλγέ' ἐθηκε, it brought woes on the Greeks.
 ἀφες ἡμῖν τα παραπτώματα ἡμῶν, forgive us our offences.

τὴν μάχην μοι λέξον (Xen.), recount to me the fight.
 δεῖξαιμι σοι πολὺ δεινότερους ἐμοῦ (Xen.), I would show you much abler men than myself.

εἰργεῖν μητρὶ πολεμίου δορυ (Aiskhyl.), to keep off from ones mother the hostile spear.

οὐδ' ἂν τοῦτο μοι ἐμεμφου (Xen.), you would not have reproached me with this.

Rule 24. The dative is frequently subjoined to εἶναι and some other verbs of like meaning, in order to imply property or possession ; as εμοὶ γὰρ ἦν ἀγροῖκος ἡδιστος βίος (Aristoph.), for I had a most agreeable country life.

τῶν φροντίδων οὐ μετῆν αὐτῇ (Xen.), she did not partake in the thoughts.

ἀργυριον καὶ χρυσίον οὐχ ὑπάρχει μοι, silver and gold have I none.

Rule 25. In general, a dative may be subjoined to all sorts of verbs, when we have to signify either the means by which an action is accomplished, or the object in whose acquisition of something it terminates; or in other words, for whom it is done; as ἀργυρέαις λογχαῖσι μαχου καὶ πάντα κρατησεῖς, fight with silver darts and you will subdue all things.

ὧ δὴ τονδε πλοῦν ἐστείλαμεν (Soph.), for whom we undertook this voyage.

Rule 26. A genitive often follows the verb in the place of the accusative, when it is intended to represent the thing mentioned as only partially affected by the action, as where in English we should use the word some; as δος μοι ὕδατος, give me some water.

εὐνοίας εἶναι (Thuc.), to be kindly disposed.

μνημης εἶναι, to remember.

πατάξαι τῆς κεφαλῆς, to break (a part of) ones head.

Rule 27. Many sorts of verbs govern a genitive from the nature of their signification, some at the same time governing an accusative and others not : they are chiefly such as follow :

1. Verbs implying the idea of abounding or wanting, or indeed of having any particular quantity of a thing ; as πολεμου ἡ πολις εγεμεν (Isoc.), the city was full of war.

οινοιο κορεσσαμενος (Hom.), satisfied with wine.

σπανιζοντε βιου (Eurip.), destitute of a livelihood.

οφθαλμῶν μεν αμερσε, διδου δ' ἡδεϊαν αοιδὴν (Hom.), she deprived him of his eyes, but gave him sweet song.

2. Verbs implying the idea of beginning or ceasing, of abstaining or delivering, of separating, differing, or being distant, with many others of kindred signification, such as in English would be followed by the particle from ; as δρομου ηρξαντο (Xen.), they began a race.

λῆγ' εριδος (Hom.), cease from strife.

εκωλυον τῆς πορείας αὐτὸν (Xen.), they kept him from his journey.

τυραννων ελευθερωθησαν (Herod.), they were freed from tyrants.

βασιλειαν και τυραννίδα διαφερειν αλληλων ενομιζε (Xen.), he thought that regal government and tyranny differed from one another.

απεχει τῶν αργυρείων πλείον πεντακοσιων σταδιων (Xen.), it is distant from the silver mines more than five hundred furlongs.

3. Most verbs which signify the actions of the senses, that of sight excepted, and the operations and affections of the mind; as τινων οσφραινομενος ἡσθειης (Xen.), what things would you like to smell?

αυτὸς τοῦτο Σωκρατους ηκουσα (Xen.), I myself have heard this from Socrates.

ακροασομαι τοῦ τε κατηγορου και τοῦ απολογουμενου ὁμοίως αμφοῖν (Demosth.), I will listen both to the plaintiff and defendant alike.

μνησασθε δε θουριδος αλκῆς (Hom.), be mindful of impetuous courage.

παρημεληκας τῆς μητρὸς (Xen.), you have neglected your mother.

μη μεγάλων δεῖ επιθυμεῖν παρὰ το δικαιον (Isoc.), we must not covet greatness beyond what is right.

4. Verbs relating to value or desert, blame or praise; as ωνεονται τας γυναῖκας μεγάλων χρηματων (Herod.) they purchase their wives at great prices.

ποσου αν πριαιο (Xen.), for how much might you buy it?

την σοφίαν αργυριου πωλεῖν (Xen.), to sell wisdom for money.

τῆς μεγιστης τιμωρίας αξιωθῆναι (Xen.), to be deemed worthy of the greatest punishment.

ζηλῶ σε τοῦ νοῦ, τῆς δε δειλίας στυγῶ (Soph.), I admire thee for thy sense, but hate thee for thy cowardice.

διωξομαι σε δειλίας (Aristoph.), I will prosecute thee for cowardice.

Rule 28. When a verb active governs two cases, one of these, namely that more remotely affected, is governed also by the passive, while the other becomes its subject; as πεισθην ταῦτα ὑπὸ σοῦ (Xen.), I was persuaded to these things by you.

ρητορικὴν ἐπαιδεύθη (Plat.), he was taught rhetoric.

ὧ ἐδοθη πολὺ, he to whom much has been given.

6. Syntaxis of Pronouns.

Rule 29. The pronoun of the third person, ὁ, he, serves also for the definite article, and this is its principal use. It is prefixed to the noun in order to determine and limit its application to some particular individual of the kind already known, mentioned, or implied; as συ εἶ ὁ ἄνθρωπος, thou art the man.

Note.—Συ εἶ ἄνθρωπος would have signified only thou art a man in general, without referring to any one man in particular.

Obs. 1. The article is also employed very frequently when the whole of a kind or nature is considered as it were collected in one, and referred to as a known existence; as μειζων δε τούτων ἐστὶν ἡ ἀγάπη, but the greatest of these is love.

ἐγινώσκε τι ἦν ἐν τῷ ἄνθρωπῳ, he knew or discerned what was in man.

Note.—The English idiom in most of these cases rejects the article, but not in all : thus we say, the dog is a sagacious animal.

Obs. 2. Even proper names sometimes admit the article for more emphatic distinction ; as.

τον Χρυσην ητιμησε, he dishonored Chryses.

Obs. 3. This article is of constant service instead of the personal or possessive pronouns ; as την χεῖρα δος την δεξιάν (Aristoph.), give me thy right hand.

Rule 30. When a noun is intended either to apply at once to all things of the kind, as in general propositions ; or, though indicating some particular individual, still to leave that individual undetermined, that is, unidentified with any one previously known, declaring merely of what kind it is ; in such cases the definite article cannot be admitted ; as παντων χρηματων μετρον ανθρωπος, man is a measure of all things.

εἶδον εκ τῆς θαλασσης θηρῖον αναβαῖνον, I saw a beast ascending out of the sea.

ανθρωπος εἰμι, τοῦτο δ' εστι χειρονος καλλιον, I am a man, and this is better than a worse thing.

Note.—Such cases may often be distinguished by their admitting in English the use of such words as every, any, some, or the indefinite article a or an.

It may also be useful to observe that while the insertion of the article is limited to its proper cases, its omission is frequent in many even of these.

Rule 31. When two or more nouns are applied to the same person or thing, the article is prefixed only to the first, but when they relate to distinct persons or things, it is then, in general, repeated before each; as ὁ περιεργος καὶ συκοφάντης Δημοσθενῆς (Aischin.), that busy-body and sycophant Demosthenes.

ὁ γὰρ συμβουλος καὶ ὁ συκοφάντης διαφέρουσι (Demosth.), for the counsellor and the sycophant.

Obs. In cases, however, where no ambiguity can arise, such as those of proper names, peculiar titles, incompatible qualities, names of distinct substances, and plurals in general, this rule is often neglected; as τὸν Ἀλεξάνδρον καὶ Φίλιππον (Aiskhin.), Alexander and Philip.

ἀποπνίξαντες θαπτοῦσι καὶ τὸν οἰνοχιόν καὶ μαγειρόν καὶ ἵπποκόμον καὶ διηκονον, &c. (Herod.), they suffocate and bury both the butler and cook and groom and attendant, &c.

μεταξὺ τοῦ ποιοῦντος τε καὶ πασχοντος (Plat.), between the doer and sufferer.

τῇ ὀφεί τε καὶ ἀκοῇ (Plat.), both by the sight and hearing.

τὰς ναῦς μεγίστας καὶ ἐλαχίστας (Thuc.), the greatest and least ships.

Rule 32. The article is often joined with verbs in the infinitive, and by elleipsis with particles, giving them the force of nouns: it is also used in a manner deserving notice before relatives; as τὸ ζῆν ἀπὸ λυπῆς ἀρχομεθα, we commence our life with sorrow.

τα ἐξω, the things without, for τα ὄντα ἐξω.

τα ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς, the things on earth.

προσηκεῖ μισεῖν τοὺς οἷος περ οὗτος (Demosth.), it is well to hate such men as this.

Rule 33. As a personal pronoun, ὁ, he, is not much used, except it be with some emphasis, as in marking distinctions or referring to a new subject of discourse; as οἱ μὲν λόγοις πειθόμενοι οἱ δὲ καὶ δωροῖς (Xen.), some persuaded by words and some also by gifts.

ἐληφθῆσαν τινες, οἱ δὲ καὶ ἀπεθάνον (Xen.), some were taken and some also died.

τῆς γὰρ πεφυκα μητρὸς (Soph.), for she is my mother.

τῷ τοι μᾶλλον σκεπτέον (Plat.), on this account it is the more necessary to examine.

τοὺς ξυμμαχοὺς οὐ μελλήσομεν τιμωρεῖν, οἱ δ' οὐκέτι μελλουσι κακῶς πασχειν (Thuc.), we shall not be about to punish our allies, and they will no longer be ill treated.

Note.—By a peculiar usage after the conjunction καὶ, and in some other phrases, it is common to put ὅς instead of ὁ; as καὶ ὅς ἐθαύμασε, (Xen.) and he wondered; καὶ ὅς εἶπεν, (Xen.) and he said. A similar anomaly may sometimes be observed in distinctions; as πόλεις ἃς μὲν ἀναιρῶν εἰς ἃς δὲ τοὺς φυγάδας κατὰγον, (Demosth.) destroying some of the towns and into others conducting the fugitives.

In Ionic writers, such as Homer and Herodotus, on the contrary, the demonstrative is constantly superseding the use of the relative, an idiom nearly resembling the English; as ἀλλὰ τα μὲν πόλιων ἐξεπράθομεν, τα δὲ δασταὶ (Hom.), but as for the things we plundered from the towns, they are distributed.

Rule 34. The pronoun αὐτὸς when before the verb, or added to another pronoun, is emphatic, meaning self or same : in other cases it is the simple personal, referring to what would most naturally be understood even were it omitted ; as την χωραν αυτοι καιουσιν ὡς αλλοτριαν (Xen.), they burn the country themselves as if it were a foreign one.

αὐτὸ τοῦτο, this very thing.

προσηνεχθη αὐτῷ δαιμονιζομενος, και εθεραπευσεν αὐτον, there was brought to him one possessed, and he healed him.

Rule 35. The reciprocal οὔ, of himself, in the older writers, as Homer, is used as the third personal in general, but in the best prose writers it is restricted to its proper reflective sense ; as δαίε οἱ εκ κορυθος τε και ασπίδος ακαματον πῦρ (Hom.), she kindled for him both from his helmet and shield an unwearied fire.

αλαζονείαν οἱ γε δοκεῖν εἶναι, εφη (Xen.), he said that to him it appeared to be ostentation.

7. Syntaxis of Verbs.

Rule 36. In general the noun most immediately affected by the active verb becomes in change of construction the subject of the passive ; but it is remarkable in the Greek idiom, that, where an active verb governs two cases, that more remotely affected may in many cases be made the subject of the passive as well as the other; as κεχειροτονημαὶ ἀρχὴν (Aristoph.), I am appointed to the government.

ἐπιτετραμμένοι τὴν φυλακὴν (Thuc.), entrusted with the watch.

Rule 37. Verbs are often used in the middle or passive forms, and followed by an accusative, when it is required to signify to cause a thing to be done for one, or as we should say, to get it done; as τὰ ὅπλα μοι ἐποιήσω (Xen.); have you got me the armor made?

τὸν πεζὸν ἀπογραφόμενος (Herod.), causing the foot-soldiers to be enrolled.

παῖδας ἐκδιδασκεσθαι (Eurip.), to get children taught.

Observations on the Use of the Tenses.

The proper force of the several tenses, as already described, is in itself sufficiently distinct, nor can it ever be doubtful which ought to be employed, provided that the point of time to which the verb is intended to refer be clearly determined: frequently, however, especially in the infinitive, optative, subjunctive, and imperative moods, this is not the case, and hence, in these moods, the selection of the proper tense is often a matter of nicety, and sometimes rather of choice than necessity. To consider carefully to what point of time it is proper that the verb should refer, is almost the only direction that can with advantage be given : reading and practice must do the rest.

In the indicative mood the point of time to which the several tenses have respect is for the most part both certain and obvious. The present represents the action as still continuing at the time of speaking : the imperfect does the same with reference to some particular point of time past : the future reckons from the time of speaking, declaring what is to be accomplished after it : the aorist always declares the accomplishment of the action before the time of speaking, and often, the context so requiring, before some particular point of the past time : the parakeimen refers to the time of speaking, representing the result of the action as then existing : the hypersyntelick does the same in reference to some particular point of time past.

The participles, from their nature, have respect to the time of the action of the leading verb, and as their relation to this is generally very obvious, their proper use is not attended with much difficulty.

Note.—Of all the tenses the time referred to is least determined in the aorist, whence its name. When it is a point of time past, this tense will require to be expressed by the English pluperfect ; as Χρυσὴν ἡτιμῆσ' ἀρητῆρα Ἀτρεΐδης· ὁ γὰρ ἦλθε (Hom.), Atreides dishonored Chryses the priest ; for he had come.

In general, to assist in distinguishing between the aorist and present, it may be observed that the former will be required whenever the scope of the discourse embraces the accomplishment of the action, or whenever the action is contemplated as past or accomplished in relation to that with which the context most nearly connects it; while the present, on the contrary, always represents the action as still continuing or imperfect.

The distinction between the aorist and parakeimen is more easy, and not quite so necessary: for as the latter contemplates the result of the action, it necessarily presupposes its accomplishment. The aorist, therefore, is involved in the parakeimen, and may in all cases be substituted for it without positive error. We must not, however, conclude that the parakeimen may with equal freedom be substituted for the aorist, for such an inference would be obviously erroneous.

The parakeimen, as passing at once to the result of the action, appears to be sometimes employed in order to convey the idea of haste or rapidity, and at others to express the tone of authority; as φραζε και πεπραξεται (Aristoph.), speak and it will be done.

ινα, ην μη υπακουσωσι, τεθνηκωσι (Thuc.), that, unless they obey, they may die; literally, be dead.

The foregoing remarks may be illustrated by the following passage from Lucian. Hermes says to Charon, ωστε λυε τα απογεια, την αποδάθραν ανελωμεθα, το αγκυριον ανεσπασθω, πετασον το ιστιον, ευθυνε, ω πορθμευ, το πηδαλιον, so unfasten the moorings, (set about it immediately, and while it is doing) let us take up the ladder (an action less immediate, and contemplated also in its accomplishment), let the anchor be drawn up (the παρακεῖμεν seems here to indicate authority and-dispatch, or perhaps is used because the state in which the anchor remains after being drawn up is more particularly contemplated), spread the sail (the aorist is used here merely as the most simple and common imperative), guide the helm, boatman (an action that was to continue indefinitely).

Some of these, it must be confessed, are nice shades of distinction, but it cannot be doubted that to a Grecian perception they were not without propriety and grace.

On the Use of the Moods.

Rule 38. A verb in the infinitive mood commonly stands in immediate relation to some other verb, either as its subject or object, nearly in the manner of a noun: it may also, however, be subjoined to adjectives, and to certain particles; as πᾶσιν ἡμῖν καταναεῖν οφείλεται (Eurip.), to die is due from us all.

παραίνῳ σοι γραφεῖν, I recommend you to write.

λεγειν τε και πρασσειν δυνατότατος (Thuc.), very able both in speaking and acting.

Βορύσθενος πινεσθαι ἡδιστος ἐστίν (Herod.), the Borysthenes is very sweet to drink.

ὥστε ἰκανὸν εἶναι (Xen.), so as to be sufficient.

Obs. Conversely, a verb in immediate dependence on another is commonly put in the infinitive.

Rule 39. The subject of the infinitive, if it have one, is commonly put in the accusative case, or at least understood to be so; but when it happens to be the same with that of the verb on which the infinitive depends, it commonly remains in the nominative, or such other case as it had before; as δος με τισασθαι μορον πατρός (Aiskhyl.), grant that I may avenge the fate of my father.

ηγγέλιται ἡ μαχη ισχυρὰ γεγονέναι και πολλοὺς τεθνάναι (Plat.), the fight is said to have been obstinate, and it is said that many are dead.

ησθομην αὐτῶν οἰομένων σοφωτάτων εἶναι ἀνθρώπων, I perceived that they thought themselves to be exceedingly wise men.

Rule 40. The infinitive mood may have the neuter article prefixed to it in every case, and is thus enabled to fulfil almost every office of a noun; as το ἀμάρτανειν ἀνθρώπους οὐτας οὐδέν, οἶμαι, θαυμαστὸν (Plat.), that those who are men should err, is, I think, nothing wonderful.

τι τούτου μακαριώτερον, τοῦ γῆ μιχθῆναι (Xen.), what is happier than this, to be mingled with earth?
δοκεῖ τούτῳ διαφέρειν ἀνὴρ τῶν ἄλλων ζῶων, τῷ τιμῆς ορεγεσθαι (Xen.), man appears to differ in this from the other animals, namely in seeking for honor.

προς το μετριων δεῖσθαι πεπαιδευμένος (Xen.), educated so as to be moderate in his wants.

Note.—When the article is in the genitive there often appears to be an elleipsis of some such word as ἐνεκα, for the sake of; as τας αιτίας εγραψα τοῦ μη τινας ζητῆσαι ποτε ἐξ ὅτου τοσοῦτος πόλεμος κατέστη (Thuc.), I have described the causes in order that none may ever question from what so great a war arose.

Rule 41. The infinitive has often the force of the indicative or imperative, there seeming to be an elleipsis of some familiar phrase, such as he said, or it happened, or remember, on which it should depend; as ἐπειδὴ οὐ ἐκβῆναι τὴν ψυχὴν (Plat.), after that his soul had departed.

καὶ τὸν κελεύσαι δοῦναι (Xen.), and he commanded to give it.

οὐ δὲ ὅταν ἐμὲ ὁρᾷς αἰφνιδίως ἐπεκθεῖν (Thuc.), but do not as soon as you see me suddenly rush out to me.

Rule 42. The indicative is more used than in English in oblique or dependent assertions, especially in citing the words of another with ὅτι or ὥς, in which case the tense also which was used by the original speaker, is often retained unchanged; as ἐβουλευοντο εἴτε κατακαυσουσιν εἴτε τι ἄλλο χρῆσονται (Thuc.), they consulted whether they should burn it or adopt some other plan.

ελεγεν ὅτι ἐλευθερος εστι, καὶ τὸ γένος εἰν Μιλησιος (Isoc.), he said that he was free, and that he was one of Miletus.

Rule 43. The indicative of the past tenses is used with the particles ει and αν in hypothetical and conditional expressions, even in cases purely imaginary, provided that they respect the past or present time; as ει μη ετυγχανεν αυτοῖς επιστήμη ενοῦσα, ουκ αν οἱοι τ' ἦσαν τοῦτο ποιεῖν (Plat.), unless there were intelligence in them they would not be able to do this.

ει δ' ἦσαν οἱκοι χρηστὸς ων ελανθανεν (Eurip.) if they were at home his excellence would lie concealed.

παλαι αν απολωλατε (Demosth.), you would have perished long ago.

Rule 44. In the expression of wishes, if they respect the past or present, it is common to use the indicative along with the particle εἶθε; but if they respect the future the optative is employed, either with that or some other particle, or without any; as εἶθε τοτε σοι συνεγενομην (Xen.), I wish I had then been with you.

εἶθ' ἦν καλόν μοι σοι τ' αγειν συμπλουν εμε (Eurip.), I wish it were becoming me and thee to take me as a fellow voyager.

ει γαρ εμοι τοσσήνδε θεοι δυναμιν παραθείεν (Hom.), O that the gods would bestow on me such power!

ὦ παῖ, γενοιο πατρός ευτυχέστερος! (Soph.) O child, mayst thou be more fortunate than thy father!

Note.—In respect to the past and present, the phrase ωφελον, I ought, is also much employed; as ηλυθες εκ πολεμου, ειθ' ωφελες αυτοθ' ολεσθαι (Hom.), you have come from the war, I wish you had perished there.

Rule 45. In conditional assertions of all kinds, excepting such as plainly require the indicative, it is proper to use the optative together with the particle αν, or the poetic κεν: and this use of the optative is very extensive and delicate, numberless assertions that might be made positively being thrown into a conditional form for the sake of elegance or courtesy; as δεινὰ αν ειην ειργασμενος ει λειποιμι την ταξιν (Plat.), I should do a fine thing if I should leave my post.

ισως αν ουν τινες επιτιμησειαν τοις ειρημενοις (Isocr.), some then perhaps will find fault with what has been said.

ποδας δ' αν τις δοκιμαζοι πρωτον μεν τους ονυχας σκοπων (Xen.), one should prove the feet by first examining the hoofs.

σοφλιν τι αν φησαιμεν ειναι (Xen.) what shall we say that wisdom is?

χωροις αν εισω (Soph.), go in.

ουκετ' αν κρυψαιμι (Aristoph.), I will no longer conceal.

Rule 46. In cases not admitting the indicative, and where the choice in consequence lies between the optative and subjunctive, the optative will in general be proper in speaking either of things past, or of things regarded merely as possible or imaginary; and the subjunctive in speaking of things present or future, and which at the same time are considered such as may actually be true or take place. The force of this rule ought especially to be noticed in the three following instances :—

1. In explaining the design or end of actions with the particles ἵνα, ὅφρα, ὥς, ὅπως, or μη; the optative in these cases corresponding with the English phrase that I might, and the subjunctive with that I may; as Τυδείδῃ δῶκε μένος ἵν' ἐκδηλὸς γενοίτο (Hom.), she gave courage to Tydeides that he might become conspicuous.

μὴ μὲν' ἐπὶ πύργῳ, μὴ παῖδ' ὀρφανικὸν θείης (Hom.), stay on the tower, lest you make your child an orphan.

ταῦτα γεγραπταὶ ἵνα πιστευσητέ, these things are written that ye may believe.

ὅφρα κε τερπομένης ὀπ' ἀκουῆς Σειρηνοῖιν (Hom.), that you may hear with delight the voice of the syrens.

Obs. 1. The subjunctive is, however, very frequently used instead of the optative in speaking of past intentions; as Σόλων ἀπεδημήσεν ἑτεᾶ δεκά ἵνα μὴ τίνα τῶν νόμων ἀναγκασθῇ λῦσαι (Herod.), Solon went abroad for ten years, that he might not be obliged to change any of his laws.

Obs. 2. The relative pronoun often involves the force of ἵνα, and governs the moods in the same manner; as ου γαρ οἱ παρὰ νῆες και ἑταῖροι, οἱ κεν μιν πεμποιεν (Hom.), for he has no ships or companions who might convey him.

2. In expressing suppositions or conditions, in doing which the optative is commonly accompanied by εἰ or επει, and the subjunctive by αν or one of its compounds: and it will also be useful to observe, that in the former case the conclusion is for the most part expressed by the optative with αν, while in the latter it is expressed by the indicative or imperative; as εἰ τις τοὺς κρατοῦντας τοῦ πληθοῦς ἐπ' ἀρετὴν προτρέψειεν ἀμφοτέρους αν ὠφελησειεν (Isoc.), if any one could incline those who sway the multitude to virtue he would benefit both.

εὰν σπονδαὶ γενωνται, ἀξουσιν αὐτοὺς ἐνθεν ἐξουσι τα ἐπιτηδεῖα (Xen.), if a covenant be made they will bring them where they will have what is needful.

εἰ μὲν κεν Μενελάου Ἀλεξάνδρος καταπέφνη, αὐτὸς ἐπειθ' Ἑλένην ἔχετω (Hom.), if Alexander shall kill Menelaus, let him then have Helen.

3. After relatives, whether pronouns or adverbs; as οὓς Ἀρης ἔλοι ου παῖδας εἶδον (Eurip.), those whom war snatched away saw not their children.

παντας ὅτῳ ἐντυχοιεν κτεινοντες (Thuc.), killing all whomever they might meet.

ἔπεσθε ὅποι αν τις ἡγήται (Thuc.), ye follow wherever any one leads.

Rule 47. The subjunctive, without any particle, is sometimes used nearly with the force of the infinitive, and at others with that of the imperative, for which indeed in the first person plural it regularly serves : it serves also in certain cases, especially with the negative particle ου μη, for the future indicative; as βουλει οὖν δυο ειδη θῶμεν πειθοῦς (Plat.); will you then that we suppose two sorts of persuasion?

ελθωμεν ἀνὰ αστυ, let us go through the city.

και ποτε τις ειπησι (Hom.), and some one perchance will say.

ου μη σε ανῶ, I will never leave thee.

Note.—In the aorist, after the negative μη, the use of the subjunctive instead of the imperative is the regular practice; as η συμφαθι η μη συμφῆς (Plat.), either assent or do not assent.

For further information respecting the use of the moods the student is referred to Matthiæ's Grammar.

Of the Participles.

Rule 48. Participles govern the same cases as the verbs to which they belong; as δοξάζων τον Θεόν, glorifying God.

ου σθενει νικητέον γυναικας, we must not conquer women by force.

Obs. Even verbal nouns and adjectives have sometimes the same power; as επιστημονες τα προσηκοντα τῇ ἐαυτῶν ὀπλισεί (Xen.), understanding what appertains to their own accoutrements.

Ἑρακλεῖ δωρηματα, presents to Hercules.

Rule 49. When the state or circumstances either of the noun which is the subject of the verb, or of that which is governed by it, forms the object of the verb's action, then such state or circumstances will in general be better expressed by a participle agreeing with the noun than by an infinitive mood; as κλαυσας μεθεηκε, he ceased weeping.

εκμαθησεται αμαρτων (Herod.), he will learn that he has erred.

δειξω σοφὸς γεγὼς, I will show that I have been wise.

νικωμενη ουκ ανεξεται (Eurip.), she will not endure to be conquered.

κλυοιμεν Κυκλωπ' ολωλότα, we should hear that the Cyclops was dead.

Rule 50. A participle may also be added to a verb in agreement with its subject, in order to explain the cause, manner, or design of the action; as δικαιος ων εβουληθη λαθρα απολῦσαι αυτην, being a just man he designed to put her away privately.

ουκ εφθησαν πυθομενοι τον πολεμον και ηκον ημιν αμυνοῦντες (Isocr.), they no sooner heard of the war than they came to assist us.

ηλθον εγὼ παυσουσα τεδὸν μενος (Hom.), I came to allay thy passion.

Rule 51. The participles of all the tenses may freely be constructed with εἶναι, and other verbs having the force of connectives; as ατενίζοντες ἦσαν εἰς τὸν οὐρανὸν, they were gazing into heaven.

μη προδοὺς ἡμᾶς γενῇ (Soph.), lest you should betray us.

ὁ νῦν καταστρεψάμενος εἶχαι (Xen.), that which you have now subdued.

Note.—In the above usages of the participle it may be perceived that the Greek idiom considerably resembles the English, more at least than it does the Latin or French.

Rule 52. A participle is often subjoined to a verb in cases where it would otherwise be necessary to use two independent verbs; as τοῖς ἐν φυλακῇ πνευμασι πορευθεὶς ἐκηρυξε, he went and preached to the spirits in prison.

Rule 53. A participle, accompanied for the most part but not always by a noun or pronoun, is frequently found in the genitive case without there being any other word which can properly be said to govern it: this is called the genitive absolute, and is much used in explaining the causes or attending circumstances of actions; as Θεοῦ θελοντος οὐδὲν ἰσχυεὶ φόβος, when God wills grudging avails nothing.

Obs. Other cases are also occasionally employed in a similar manner; as θεῶν φόβος οὐδεὶς ἀπέῳργε, τὸ μὲν κρινόντες, ἐν ὁμοίᾳ καὶ σέβειν καὶ μὴ (Thuc.), no fear of the gods restrained them, judging as they did that it was all alike to be pious or not.

περιϊόντι τῷ ενιαυτῷ φαινουσι παλιν (Xen.), with the return of the year they make a show-again.

προσταχθὲν αὐτῷ αναγράψαι τοὺς νομοὺς, αὐτὸν νομοθέτην κατεστησεν (Lysias), having been set to copy out the laws he constituted himself a law-giver.

ἀπλᾶς δὲ λυπᾶς ἐξὸν οὐκ οἰσῶ διπλᾶς (Eurip.), as it is permitted me to bear single griefs I will not bear double.

Rule 54. The participle is of constant service in phrases that would otherwise be expressed by the relative pronoun and verb ; as τι δὴ λεγοντες διεβαλλον οἱ διαβαλλοντες (Plat.); what then did those who accused say in accusation?

τῷ αἰτοῦντι σε δίδου, to him that asketh thee, give.

8. Syntaxis of Particles.

Of Adverbs.

Rule 55. Adverbs derived from adjectives govern the same cases as their originals ; as αἰσῶς λόγου αυλεῖν (Xen.), to play remarkably well on the pipe.

εμοὶ ὁμοίως ἐπισταμενος (Xen.), taking the same view of the matter as I do.

Rule 56. There are many adverbs which admit of being prefixed to nouns in the manner of prepositions, and these govern for the most part the genitive case. Such are χωρὶς, apart; πλην, except; προσθεν, before; οπισθεν, behind; ἐγγὺς, near; πορρω, far; ἐσω, within; ἐξω, without; περαν, beyond; ἄλῃς, enough; and many others: but ἅμα, at the same time, and ὁμοῦ, together, require the dative; as χωρὶς αὐτοῦ ἐγενετο οὐδέν, without it nothing was.

ἦ δ' ἀεκουσ' ἅμα τοῖσι γυνὴ κίεν (Hom.), but the woman went along with them unwillingly.

Rule 57. Μα and νη, particles of attestation, are followed by an accusative; as οὐ, μα τοὺς ἐν Μαραθῶνι παρακινδυνεύσαντας (Demosth.), no, by those who hazarded themselves at Marathon.

νη τοὺς θεοὺς (Plat.), yea, by the gods.

Rule 58. Some adverbs are joined with particular moods: thus ἀχρι and μέχρι, as far as, are generally used with the indicative; ὅτε and ὅποτε, when, and ἕως, whilst, with the indicative or optative; ὥς and ὅπως, as or that, with the indicative, optative, or subjunctive; while all that are compounded with αν require in most cases the subjunctive.

Rule 59. Of the two negatives οὐ and μη, the former belongs to independent, the latter to dependent propositions. Οὐ generally accompanies the indicative, and frequently also the optative; the other moods and the participle commonly take μη.

Obs. 1. If the participle be used in a manner equivalent to an assertion it takes ου; as αληθεύσαι τα οντα τε ὥς οντα, και τα μη οντα ὥς ουκ οντα (Xen.), to have represented truly what was real as being so, and what was not real as not being so.

Obs. 2. In negative propositions suspended in the form of interrogation, doubt, or surmise, μη is used with the indicative; as μη συ μειζων εἰ τοῦ πατρὸς ἡμῶν; thou art not greater than our father, art thou?

φοβουμεθα μη αμφοτερων ἡμαρτηκαμεν (Isoc.), we fear lest we have missed both.

Rule 60. Two or more negatives used together do not in Greek destroy each others force but rather confirm it; as ὥστε πᾶσιν αἰσχύνην εἶναι μη ου σπουδαζειν (Xen.), so that it is disgraceful to all not to be diligent.

σμικρὰ δε φυσις ουδὲν μεγα ουδεποτε ουδένα ουτε ιδιώτην ουτε πολιν δρᾷ (Plat.), but a little nature never does any thing great either for an individual or for the state.

Note.—There are several words which, according to their different senses, may be considered either as adverbs or conjunctions: such are ὥς, as or that; επει, after that or because; ἵνα, where or that, and some others.

Of Prepositions.

When a preposition is joined to a noun, its own proper force is of necessity combined with that of the case in which the noun happens to be. Hence it often happens that the prepositions express different meanings with different cases, and consequently that when we desire a preposition to convey any particular meaning, we must be careful that the proper case be subjoined to it.

Of the prepositions some are joined with one case only, some with two, and others with three.

Rule 61. Ἀντὶ, ἀπὸ, ἐκ, προ are joined only with the genitive; ἐν and συν with the dative; ἀνα and εἰς with the accusative.

Note.—In the older poets, however, ἀνα is sometimes used with the dative.

Rule 62. Διὰ, κατὰ, and ὑπὲρ, according to the sense which is to be expressed, may be joined either with the genitive or accusative; as will be illustrated by the following examples:—

Διὰ 1. with Gen. through, by way or means of; as δια στενῆς πυλῆς, through a narrow gate.

δι' οργῆς, in anger.

δι' ἑνδεκατου ετεος, after eleven years.

2. with Acc. through, because of; as διὰ φθονον παρεδωκαν αὐτὸν, because of envy they delivered him.

Κατὰ 1. with Gen. down from, against; as βῆ δε κατ' Οὐλυμποιο καρηνων, he went down from the summits of Olympos.

τις καθ' ημῶν; who is against us?

2. with Acc. down along, according to, lying at or about; as κατὰ τον ποταμόν, down the river.

κατὰ τον νομον, according to the law.

οἱ καθ' ἡμᾶς, those of our times.

κατα μῆνα, monthly.

ὑπὲρ 1. with Gen. over, in behalf of; as ὑπὲρ τῆς κωμης γηλοφος ἦν, over the village was a hill.

ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν απεθανε, he died in our behalf.

2. with Acc. above, beyond; as

ὑπὲρ ἑξηκοντα ετη γεγονῶς, above sixty years old.

Θραξὶ τοῖς ὑπὲρ Ἑλλησποντον, to the Thracians beyond the Hellespont.

Rule 63. Ἀμφὶ, ἐπὶ, μετὰ, παρὰ, περὶ, πρὸς, and ὑπὸ, may be joined either with the genitive, dative, or accusative.

Ἀμφὶ 1. with Gen. about, concerning; as ὄψιν ἀμφὶ παιδὸς ἐμοῦ (Eurip.), a vision concerning my child.

2. with Dat. about, on, on account of; as ἀμφὶ πυρὶ στήσαι τριποδα, to set the tripod on the fire.

τοιῇδ' ἀμφὶ γυναικὶ πολὺν χρόνον ἀλγεα πασχειν, on account of such a woman to suffer woes for a long time.

3. with Acc. about, near, around; as οἱ ἀμφὶ βασιλέα, those about the king.

Note.—This preposition closely resembles περὶ in almost all its meanings. In the Attic prose writers it is seldom joined with any other case than the accusative.

Επὶ 1. with Gen. on, touching, at, in, during, over; as τα ἀχθεα ἐπὶ τῶν κεφαλῶν φορεουσι (Herod.), they carry their burdens on their heads.

ἐπὶ τῶν δούλων ἐλεγόμεν (Plat.), we were speaking touching servants.

μεῖναι ἐπὶ τοῦ ποταμοῦ (Xen.), to stay at the river.

ἐπὶ Κεκροπος, in the time of Kekrops.

οἱ ἐπὶ τῶν πραγμάτων, those who are over the affairs.

2. with Dat. on, depending on, following on, for, in addition to; as μένειν ἐπὶ τοῖς ὅπλοις (Xen.), to remain on their arms.

ἐπ' ἀρτῷ μόνῳ ζῆν, to live on bread alone.

τα μὲν ἐστὶν ἐφ' ἡμῖν, τα δ' οὐκ ἐφ' ἡμῖν (Epictet.), some things are dependent on us, and some are not dependent on us.

ἀνέστη ἐπ' αὐτῷ Φεραύλας (Xen.), following on him arose Pheraulas.

ἐπὶ ποσῷ ἀν βουλοιο; for how much would you?

οὐκ ἐπὶ τεχνῇ ἐμαθες (Plat.), you did not learn as for a profession.

ἐπὶ τούτοις, moreover.

3. with Acc. on, against, aiming at, lasting; as ἀναβαίνειν ἐφ' ἵππον, to mount on horseback.

ἐπ' αὐτὸν μηχανασθαι (Xen.), to plot against him.

ἐπ' αὐτόγε τοῦτο παρεσμεν (Aristoph.), we are here for this very purpose.

ἐπὶ δυο ἡμέρας, for two days.

Μετὰ 1. with Gen. with, following with; as αὐτὸς καὶ οἱ μετ' αὐτοῦ, himself and those who were with him.

μετὰ θρασους, with boldness.

2. with Dat. (only in poetry) with, amongst; as μετὰ προμαχοισι μαχεσθαι, to fight amongst the foremost.

3. with Acc. after, in pursuit of; as μεθ' ἡμέρας ἕξ, after six days.

χρυσεῖον μετὰ κῶας, in pursuit of the golden fleece.

Παρά 1. with Gen. by, on the part of, from; as κατηγορεῖται παρὰ τῶν Ἰουδαίων, he is accused by or on the part of the Jews.

παρὰ σου εμαθομεν, we learnt from thee.

2. with Dat. with, in the presence, keeping, or estimation of; as οὐ παρὰ μητρὶ σιτοῦνται οἱ παῖδες (Xen.), the boys do not board with their mother.

χαριτι παρὰ Θεῷ καὶ ἀνθρώποις, in favor with God and men.

3. with Acc. by, beside, in comparison with, beyond, transgressing; as ἐκαθητο παρὰ τὴν θαλάσσαν, he sat by the sea.

ἡλαττωσας αὐτὸν βραχύ τι παρ' ἀγγέλους, thou hast lowered him a little in comparison with angels.

ἐπονει παρὰ τοὺς ἄλλους, he labored beyond the others.

παρὰ τον νομον, beside, or transgressing the law.

Περὶ 1. with Gen. about, concerning, for, and in poetry above; as ταῦτα ἐγὼ λέγω περὶ ὑμῶν (Xen.), these things I say concerning you.

μαχεσθαι περὶ πατρίδος, to fight for ones country.

ἡγείσθαι τι περὶ πολλοῦ, to count a thing for much, that is, to make much account of it.

ὃς περὶ μὲν νοον ἐστὶ βροτῶν (Hom.), who indeed in understanding is above mortals.

2. with Dat. about, on, for; as περὶ τῇ χειρὶ χρυσοῦν δακτυλιον φερεῖν (Plat.), to wear on the hand a golden ring.

περὶ γὰρ διε ποιμένι λαῶν (Hom.), for he feared for the ruler of the people.

3. with Acc. about, around, in regard to, near about; as κοιμῶνται οἱ ἐφηβοὶ περὶ τα ἀρχεῖα (Xen.), the youths repose about the public courts.

αμελῶς εχειν περὶ γονέας, to be neglectful in regard to ones parents.

περὶ λυχνων ἀφὰς, about candle-light.

περὶ ἑπτακοσious, about seven hundred.

Προς 1. with Gen. towards, in respect of, appertaining to; as προς Θεοῦ καὶ προς ἀνθρωπων ἀναιτιος, guiltless towards God and towards men.

καὶ σε προς τοῦ σοῦ τεκνου ἱκνοῦμαι (Soph.), and I beseech thee by thy regard to thine own child.

οἱ προς αἵματος, relations by blood.

2. with Dat. at, in addition to; as εκειντο προς τοῖς ποσὶν αὐτοῦ, they lay at his feet.
ετι δε προς τουτοις, and moreover.

3. with Acc. to, towards, with regard to, in comparison with, with; as απέβη προς μακρὸν Ολυμπον (Hom.), he departed to high Olympus.

τα προς μεσημβριαν, the parts towards the south.
προς ευεργέτην ουδέν αξιοῦντες, doing nothing suitable towards a benefactor.

εἶπε προς τον παππον (Xen.), he said to his grandfather.

εάν τις σε προς ταῦτα ἐρωτᾷ, if any one question you with regard to these things.

προς τι με ταῦτα ἐρωτᾷς; to what end do you ask me these things?

λῆρος παντα εδοκει εἶναι προς το αργυριον εχειν (Xen.), all seemed to be nonsense in comparison with having the money.

έως ποτε εσομαι προς ὑμᾶς; how long shall I be with you?

αγωνιστέον προς τους ανδρας (Xen.), we must contend with the men.

Υπὸ 1. with Gen. from under, by the agency of, by; as νεοσσὸν ὑπὸ πτερῶν σπασας (Eurip.), having drawn a young bird from under the wings.

τετακται ὑπὸ Θεοῦ, it is ordained by God.

παντες αν ὑπὸ λιμοῦ απολοιμεθα (Xen.), we should all have perished by famine.

2. with Dat. under, in the power of; as πεπτωκὼς ὑπὸ τῷ ἵππῳ (Xen.), fallen under the horse.

ὑπὸ τοῖς πολεμίοις γενέσθαι (Xen.), to come into the power of ones enemies.

ὑπὸ τῇ λεοντῇ πιθηκος, an ape under the lion's skin.

3. with Acc. under, subject to, at the time of; as οικηματα ὑπὸ γῆν, dwellings under ground.

τῶν ὑπὸ βασιλέα βαρβαρων (Xen.), of the barbarians subject to the king.

ὑπὸ την καταλυσιν τοῦ πολέμου (Xen.), at the close of the war.

Rule 64. Prepositions in composition with verbs still continue in general to govern their proper cases, if, without altering the sense, they may be separated from the verb, and placed immediately before the noun which it governs; as αποπηδᾶν ἄρματος (Xen.), to leap from a chariot.

καταδικάζω εμαυτοῦ (Xen.), I condemn myself.

Obs. Very frequently in such cases the preposition is actually repeated before the noun, and that not without elegance; as ὅταν ὁ ἵππος ἀπὸ τῆς φατνῆς ἀποβῇ (Xen.), when the horse has gone away from the manger.

Note.—Besides those noticed above there are a few other prepositions which are of less importance, and moreover not used in composition: such are ἀνευ, without, and the poetic στερ, without; also ἐνεκα, for the sake of. All these govern a genitive.

Of Conjunctions.

Rule 66. The conditional particle αν is joined not only with the indicative of past tenses, and with the optative and subjunctive, as already mentioned, but likewise with the indicative of the present and future, and with infinitives and participles ; as κινδυνευει γ' αν φρονιμος τις ειναι ουτος (Plat.), this may happen to be some intelligent person.

πολυ αν επι μαλλον η νυν αχρειοι εσονται (Xen.),
they will in that case be still much more un-serviceable than now.

οιμαι δε τους ακουοντας ουδεν αν αντερειν (Isoc.),
I think that the hearers will say nothing against it.

χωρις της περιστάσης αν ημᾶς αισχύνης (Demosth.), beside the disgrace that would have befallen us.

Rule 67. Αν, when added to other particles or to relatives, is commonly followed by the subjunctive ; as εαν εαλωκως η (Xen.), if he be taken.

οποσα αν πλειστα δυνηται (Xen.), as many as ever he can.

Note.—Of the other conjunctions, though numerous, little need here be said. ἵνα, so that, is sometimes joined with the indicative : ει, if, επει, because, and ει μη, unless, are followed by the indicative or optative, as is also οτι, that : ωστε, so that, is usually followed by the indicative or infinitive.

PART THE FOURTH.

ON VERSIFICATION OR METRE.

Versification is in all languages founded on a certain regular recurrence of syllables distinguished in some particular manner from the rest. In English, and most of the modern European languages, the recurrent syllables are chiefly distinguished by having the acute tone or accent, but in Greek and Latin they were distinguished by being uttered with the long time.

Greek verse, then, like music, is strictly governed by time. It is founded on the distinction of long and short syllables, each of the long occupying as much time in utterance as two short. The tones or accents do indeed in the mean time rise and fall, as do the notes of a melody on the musical scale, but in this variation they are governed by no certain rule, neither does the constitution of the verse at all depend upon it. The essence of the verse, as we have already stated, consists in the rythm or keeping of time.

As a melody is measured by what musicians call bars, so is a verse by feet, each of which consists of a certain number of syllables, long or short, in a particular order.

The poetic feet most useful to be distinguished are the iamb, the trochee, the spondee, the tribrach, the daktyl, and the anapæst.

The iamb consists of a short syllable and a long, as λῶγῶ;
 the trochee of a long and a short, as μουσα;
 the tribrach of three short, as ἔθῑτῑ;
 the spondee of two long, as μουσης;
 the daktyl of one long and two short, as δᾱκτυλῑς;
 the anapæst of two short and one long, as ᾗρετῑ.

The general rules for distinguishing long and short syllables have already been given in the first part of this grammar, and the quantity of the doubtful vowels in the various grammatical forms has been marked as they occurred. For further information on these points we must refer the student to larger works, to lexicons, and above all to the reading of the poets, by which he will learn not only what is certain, but how much likewise is uncertain and variable.

The few following remarks, however, must not be omitted.

1. When in poetry short final vowels are immediately followed by other vowels, they are generally cut off.

2. Long final vowels so situated are generally, though not necessarily, shortened.

3. When a vowel naturally short is followed by a mute and a liquid, the syllable, if in heroic verse, is commonly reckoned as long; but if it be in iambic verse, it is commonly made short if the liquid be ρ, and long if it be either of the others preceded by a middle letter, as β , γ , δ .

4. The final syllable of a verse is generally held to be common, but this does not apply to anapæstics.

5. The doubtful vowels have not always any certain quantity, but are made both long and short, even in the same line; as

$\text{Ἄρες, Ἀρες, βροτολοιγε, μαιφονε, τειχισιπλήτα!}$

War, War, slaughterous, blood-stained, leveller of walls!

Of the different sorts of Verse.

The different forms of verse or measure are named from the feet of which they are principally composed. Their varieties are numerous; but we shall only notice the most important, which are the following:—

1. Dactylic Measures.

The first and most noble of all the Greek measures is the heroic or hexameter, the verse of the Iliad and Odyssey. It consists of six feet, of which the four first may be either dactyls or spondees, the fifth is generally a dactyl, and the last always a spondee; as in which all are dactyls but the last:

$\text{ἄνδρᾱ μοῖ|ἐννέπῃ|μουσᾶ πό|λυτρὸπὸν|᾽ὄς μᾶλᾶ|πόλλα,}$

$\text{ἔνθ' αὖ|Τυδεΐδῃ Διὸ|μῆδ᾽ ἰ|Πᾶλλ᾽ς Ἀ|θήνῃ,}$

in which the two first are spondees:

$\text{οὐρῆᾶ|τῇ σκίῳ|ἐντᾶ θᾶ|λᾶσσᾶ τῇ|ῆχῆ|ῆσσα,}$

in which the fifth is a spondee.

Most verses, except such as are very short, both in this sort of metre and in others, require in some part a pause or break, and the just placing of this is of much importance to their effect. It must, of course, be at the end of a word, but the ear for the most part requires that it should not be at the end of a foot. In each of the three lines above cited the pause falls somewhere in the third foot, but this is by no means necessary, although it be, in this kind of verse, its most common situation.

In the poems of Homer it is not uncommon to find syllables lengthened which by the ordinary rules ought to be short. This often happens in final syllables when short vowels are followed by semi-vowels : but among several causes to which these and other anomalies in his versification have been ascribed, the most deserving notice is the Æolic Digamma.

It appears that some at least of the earlier Greeks prefixed to many words which we now find commencing with a vowel a certain labial sound, supposed to have nearly resembled that of our w. In later days this practice was by most of the Greeks abandoned, but in the Æolic dialect it was much longer retained, nor had they the sound alone, but employed also a proper character to represent it, which from its figure, nearly similar to the Roman F, obtained the name of digamma. In what particular words this letter was pronounced is at present a matter of much uncertainty, but from the analogy of the Latin, which sprung out of the Greek at a very early period, it is probable that we may place on the list such words as οἶνος, wine, αρετή, virtue, ἦρ, spring, and others, corresponding as they do to the Latin vinum, virtus, ver. Our own word war may indicate as much in regard to Αρης.

That this sound, though unwritten, was used in many instances by Homer, and that this was the reason of his lengthening certain short syllables, and not striking off certain final vowels, is every way probable. At the same time it is evident that this subject has given occasion to much learned trifling, involved as it is in hopeless uncertainty, and being after all of but little practical importance; and we therefore think it well to warn the young student against bestowing on it a disproportionate measure of attention.

The hexameter often alternates with another sort of dactylic measure, and they form together the sort of verse called elegiac. In the measure alluded to the two first feet may be either dactyls or spondees; then follows a single long syllable; after this two dactyls; and then another single syllable. Thus—εκ νεφέλης φερεται χιόνος μενος ηδὲ χαλάζης.

βρῶντῇ | δ' ἔκ λαμ|πρᾶς | γιγνέται | ἀστέρῳ|πης.

2. Anapæstic Measures.

Verses founded on anapæsts freely admit both spondees and dactyls in their place.

φεῦ φεῦ | δῦστᾶν' | ἀλλ' οὐδ' | ἑσῖδεῖν
δυνάμαι|σέ θελῶν | πολλ' ἀνέ|ρεσθαῖ
πολλᾶ πύ|θεσθαῖ | πολλᾶ δ' ἀ|θρήσαι
τοιᾶν | φρικῇν | πᾶρῥχεις | μοῖ.

The last line is catalectic, that is to say, its last foot is imperfect, which is also the case in those that follow :

‘ἡμῖν δ’ | Γ’ θᾶκῃ | πατρὶς ἐσ|τῖ πλεῖστέμιν δ’ | ‘ἄμ’ Ὀδυσσεὶ θεῖ|φ. CRATIN.

There is a longer form much employed by Aristophanes, and hence named Aristophanic. It is also catalectic.

ὦ τῆς | μέγαλῃς | σοφίᾳς | ἐπιθῦμῆσᾱς | ἀνθρῶ|πῆ παρ’ ‘ἡ|μῶν
 ‘ὦς εὐ|δαίμων | ἐν Ἀθῆ|ναίοις | καὶ τοῖς | Ἑλλῆ|σὶ γένῃ|σεῖ
 εἰ μνη|μῶν εἰ | καὶ φρον|τίστῃς | καὶ τὸ τᾶ|λαῖ πῶ|ρὸν ἐνεσ|τῖν ἐν τῇ | ψυχῇ | καὶ μῇ | κἀμνεῖς | μῇθ’ ‘ἐσ|τῶς μῇ|τῆ βαδῖ|ζῶν.

3. Iambic Measures.

A verse of six iambs with certain liberties, and called iambic trimeter, is that principally employed by the Greek dramatists. Its rule is most strict in the Tragedians ; but even with these it is permitted to introduce tribrachs in every place but the last, spondees in all the odd places, dactyls in the first and third, and anapæsts in the first, and sometimes, though rarely, elsewhere. In the introduction of proper names still greater license is allowed.

δεῖνός | χάρᾱκ|τῆρ κα|πίσῃ|μὸν ἐν | ἑρῶτοῖς
 ἐσθλοῖς | γένεσ|θαῖ κα|πὶ μέ|ζον ἐρ|χέται
 τῆς εὐ|γένει|ᾱς ὄνῳ|μᾶ τὸ|σῖν ἀξί|οις.

A shorter and pleasing form of iambic verse is common in Anacreon :—

‘ὁ πλοῦ|τὸς ἐψ|γῆ χρῦ|σου
 τὸ ζῆν | παρῇ|γῆ θνη|τοῖς
 ἐ|κάρ|τέρου | φύλα|των.

4. Trochaic Measures.

Trochaic measures are less used than either of the former kinds. They admit most of the other feet except iambs.

πῶλῆ | Θρῆκίῃ τῖ | δῆ με
 λῶξῶν | ὀμμά | σῖ βλῆ | ποῦσα
 νῆλῆ | ὦς φεῦ | γεῖς, δό | κεῖς δε
 μῆδῆν | εἰδῆ | αἰ σὸ | φον ; ANAC.

μᾶτῆρ | οὐ λῶ | γῶν ᾗ | γῶν ἔστ' | ἀλλ' ᾗ | νῆλῶ | ταῖ χρό | νος
 ἐν μέ | σῶ μά | τῆν, πέρ | αἰνεῖ | δ' οὐδῆν | ᾗ πρό | θυμί | α.

There are besides certain measures in which no one foot very decidedly prevails, and which may therefore be called mixed. Among the most agreeable of these is the Sapphic, which is, however, almost a trochaic.

καὶ γάρ | αἰ φεῦ | γεῖ τᾷ | χῆ | ὦς δι | ὠξεῖ
 κ' αἰ δέ | δῶρᾶ | μῆ δέ | χῆτ' | ἀλλᾶ | δῶσει
 αἰ δέ | μῆ φί | λεῖ τᾷ | χῆ | ὦς φί | λᾶσει
 ἡ οὐ κέν ἔ | θελλοῖς. SAPPH.

Where long syllables are thrown in before dactyls or after anapæsts, a variety of verse is produced which is called Ionic.

πλη | ρῆς μέν ἔ | φαῖνέτ' | ᾗ σέ | λᾶνα
 αἰ | δ' ᾗς πέρ | ῖ | βῶμῶν | ἔστᾶ | θῆσαν. SAPPH.

δόκῖμῶς | δ' οὐ | τῖς ᾗ | ποσ | τᾶς
 μέγᾰλῶ | ρεῦ | μάτῖ φῶ | τῶν
 ἔχῦροῖς | ἔρ | κῆσῖν εἰρ | γεῖν
 ᾗ | μάχῶν | κῦ | μά θᾰλᾰσ | σῆς. AESCHYL.

THE END.

Printed by J. H. Poyson, 511 Second Street.

